ULSTER REFUSES BRITISH OFFER

CABINET WILL HAVE COUNTER-PROPOSALS TO MAKE SAYS CRAIG

Government Plan Contains Principles Impossible of Attainment, Says Statement

ADVISES POSTPONEMENT OF ULSTER-BRITISH CONFERENCE

Suggests that Government Consider Ulster Plan First

LONDON.—By The Associated Press.—The Ulster cabinet Friday rejected the government's plan for a settlement of the Irish question on the ground that it contained fundamental principles which under existing conditions were impossible of attainment. The Ulster ministers, however, are putting forward counter proposals.

A communique issued by the Northern Ireland cabinet suggests that the government should consider these counter proposals before the proposed meeting of the British and Ulster cabinets.

The text of the communique said:

"The suggestions put forward by the imperial government were received late last night and were considered. The Ulster cabinet is drawing up a detailed reply which it is hoped to forward shortly.

"As, however, certain fundamental principles are involved in the suggestion which under existing circumstances are impossible of attainment, Sir James Craig (the premier) with the unanimous approval of his colleagues, has informed the premier that no useful purpose would be served by holding a formal consultation between his majesty's government and the government of Northern Ireland until certain suggestions in the government's proposals are withdrawn.

Will Present Other Plans

"The formal reply of the Ulster cabinet will indicate other and more practicable means of securing peace without infringing on the rights of Ulster."

The Ulster cabinet ministers were summoned here recently by Sir James Craig to consider the government's proposals, and they met Friday forenoon to discuss the plan for a settlement of the Irish question which was contained in a statement from the British ministry. This, as noted in the communique, was received last night, and was understood to be in the form of certain definite suggestions for a scheme in which Ulster was asked to join, for an all Ireland parliament.

Ulster's objection to the plan is believed to be that it would deprive her

STOCK BROKERAGE FIRM WINS CASE IN FEDERAL COURT

Jury Returns Verdict With Judgment of $13,102 Against Winifred Montague

ACTION ARISES OVER SALE OF STOCK IN PAPER COMPANY

Federal Court Term Here Comes to a Close

A JURY in United States court returned a verdict at 5:30 Thursday afternoon awarding Lee, Higginson & Company judgment of $13,102 against Mrs. Winifred Montague. Trial of the case lasted a week.

In this action Lee, Higginson & Company sued to recover on the sale of 551 shares of stock in the Union Bag and Paper company owned by the Montague company. Plaintiff claimed an order was received to sell the stock and in compliance with this order the stock brokerage firm sold the securities for $85 per share. When the Montague company was notified to turn over the stock, the order to sell the securities was repudiated, it was claimed. Lee, Higginson & Company, to make good its own transaction, it was contended, then had to go into the open market and buy back 551 shares of stock in the Union Bag and Paper company, at prices ranging from $111 to $115.

The company brought suit against Winifred Montague, C. N. Barrington, Wallace R. Montague, Jr., and Claude S. Bryant to recover $13,321.76, the amount claimed to have been lost in the transaction.

During the trial of the case Judge Luse dismissed Messrs. Barrington, Montague and Bryant as defendants in the action, leaving Mrs. Montague, representing the Montague company, as sole defendant in the action.

The jury returned a verdict awarding the brokerage firm $13,102.

The term of United States court here was ended after the jury in this case returned its verdict.

FRENCH BLUEBEARD DENIES HE KILLED TEN WOMEN

VERSAILLES.—By The Associated Press.—Henry Landru, alleged "Bluebeard," dropped Friday the aloof attitude of the business man discussing commercial transactions, maintained since the opening of his trial on charges of having committed eleven murders, ten of them of women. In figurative language he entered a stout denial of his guilt.

"There is no blood on my hands; they perhaps are not absolutely clean, but they never shed a drop of human blood," he said.

FRANCE CONCERNED ONLY TO MAINTAIN HER STANDING ARMY

At Outs With Britain and Japan Over Recent Disappointments

WASHINGTON.—The French stake in the Washington Conference is infinitely less considerable than that of any other Great Power, save only Italy, which has, in reality no stake whatsoever. The French interest, moreover, is concentrated not upon the question of the limitation of naval armament, but upon the problem of the Pacific.

What France would like is plain: She would regard as a triumphant outcome of the Conference any form of agreement which would revive the old special insurance treaty which bound the United States to defend France against any new German aggression. But even in Paris it is clearly perceived that the Tripartite agreement is as dead as the Pragmatic Sanction.

Land Forces to be "Referred"

As a consequence France will raise the question only if she is pressed to accept other views than her own as to the limitation of her land forces. And since she is ready with this answer, and neither the United States nor Great Britain is prepared with and adequate answer it is easy to forecast that the problem of land forces will be referred to some convenient committee authorized to make an exhaustive examination and report some time in the remote and irrelevant future.

What then will France seek to do? Patently she will aim at one thing. she will seek in all ways to preserve and expand American friendship. Her stage in the Pacific is geographically and statistically impressive but sentimentally little. So far as France is thinking in terms of expansion, colonial enterprise and economic development, she is thinking of Africa. Not even the possibility of losing her India as a result of Japanese hostility engendered by French support of American proposals has weight at the moment.

Welcomes Naval Reduction

In a word France comes to the Conference with free hands and with a profound desire to make the best of an obvious opportunity to win Ameri-

CITIZENS PAY TRIBUTES TO SOLDIER DEAD

Impressive Service at La Crosse Theatre in Morning Marks Opening of Armistice Day Observance

ELOQUENT ADDRESS GIVEN BY OTTO M. SCHLABACH

Parade and Exercises this Afternoon to Complete Program for the Day

THE booming bell of St. Joseph's cathedral, tolling with thousands of others throughout the nation for the burial of an unknown soldier at Arlington, was the only sound that broke the impressive hush that spread over a throng of men and women in the La Crosse Theater who this morning attended the Armistice Day memorial in the La Crosse Theater arranged by the Community Council.

Some five hundred men and women stood with bowed heads for the two-minute period of silence enjoined by President Harding, while thousands of miles away in the national cemetery the nameless private soldier was lowered into the grave in the presence of the leading statesmen and soldiers of the world. In La Crosse, as in the rest of the nation, it was the climax of the solemnities with which the third anniversary of the ending of the World War was celebrated.

And in La Crosse, too, the solemn memorial for those who died in 1917 and 1918 was tinged with the prayer and hope that in the conference convening on this anniversary in Washington there may be found the way to prevent a repetition of the sacrifices of the world war. The prayers of the clergymen which imparted a deeply religious tone to the gathering in the theater and the brief but impassioned address of Otto M. Schlabach, alike voiced the longing and determination for peace.

A parade this afternoon in which hundreds of ex-service men and citizens marched, followed by exercises at Yeomen hall will mark the conclusion of the Armistice day celebration in La Crosse.

The theater memorial service began with the entire audience singing "America," followed by the invocation by Rev. Carlos C. Rowlison. "Lest We Forget," an appropriate song selection was rendered by the vested choir of the Presbyterian church in charge of Miss Stella Trane.

Rev. Peter Pape offered a prayer previous to the two minute silence period. Miss Trane sang "In Flanders Field" as arranged by Mrs. Percy Cilley. Following the benediction by Rev. M. Ubstager, taps were sounded by Harry Tuckman.

Schlabach address

In his brief talk, Mr. Schlabach said in part:

"Words cannot express adequately that which is in our hearts this day. This is the anniversary of the greatest victory in the world's history, yet it is not of victory we are thinking. We are thinking of the dead.

"The nations pause in their labor for an hour while before them pass in silent review the great armies of the soldier dead, unmarshalled, save only by their own heroic deeds. The Olympia, the famous battlescarred veteran of the seas arrived from the shores of France yesterday afternoon. As she slowly steamed her way up the Potomac, she was saluted by the super dreadnaught, the North Dakota by a discharge of twenty-one guns, the highest military salute. It was the second time this famous old ship of war had been thus honored; the first time when as the flagship of Admiral Dewey, she was returning from Manila Bay where she had wrested an empire in the Pacific from the crushing grip of a despot nation. Yesterday as she was returning home with the body of an unknown American soldier.

"With all military pomp and splendor the body was escorted by a group of cavalry, conveyed to the Capitol and placed on the historic catafalque where had rested the bodies of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. In the Democracy of patriotic devotion, George Washington, the aristocrat, the general of armies, Abraham Lincoln the president, the emancipator of millions, the commoner and this unknown American doughboy, who will continue nameless throughout the ages side by side.

"This nation in these symbolic ceremonies today ordains that they shall live together in the deathless memory of a grateful nation."

The speaker appealed to the audience not to let this be a "memorial day for the dead, alone, but a day of consecration for the living pledging ourselves anew not to break faith those who died in Flanders field."

Miss Helen MacArthur, Mrs. Charles Mears and Miss Maud Boyd, Red Cross aides in uniform, were the ushers at the theater.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The text of President Harding's address at the burial of an unknown soldier at Arlington cemetery follows:

"Mr. Secretary of War and Ladies and Gentlemen:

"We are met today to pay the impersonal tribute. The name of him whose body lies before us took flight with his imperishable soul. We know nor whence he came, but only that his death marks him with the everlasting glory of an American dying for his country.

"He might have come from anyone of millions of American homes. Some mother gave him in her love and tenderness of her most cherished hopes. Hundreds of mothers are wondering today, finding a touch of solace in the possibility that the nation bows in grief over the body of one she bore to live and die, if need be, for the republic.

All Sacrificed Alike

"If we give rein to fancy, a score of sympathetic chords are touched, for in this body there once glowed the soul of an American with the aspirations and ambitions of a citizen who cherished life and its opportunities. He may have been a native or an adopted son; that matters little, because they glorified the same loyalty, they sacrificed alike.

"We do not know his station in life, because from every station came the patriotic response of the five millions. I recall the days of creating armies and the departing of caravans which braved the murderous seas to reach the battle lines for maintained nationality and preserved civilization.

"The service flag marked mansion and cottage alike and riches were common to all homes in the consciousness of service to country.

Died in Glory

"We do not know the eminence of his birth, but we do know the glory of his death. He died for his country and greater devotion hath no man than this. He died unquestioning, uncomplaining, with faith in his heart and hope on his lips, that his country should triumph and its civilization survive. As a typical soldier of this representative democracy, he fought and died, believing in the indisputable justice of his country's cause. Conscious of the world's upheaval, appraising the magnitude of a war the like of which had never horrified humanity before, perhaps he believed his to be a service destined to change the tide of human affairs.

"In the death gloom of gas, the bursting of shells and the rain of bullets, men face more intimately the great God over all, their souls are aflame and consciousness expands and hearts are searched. With the din of battle, the glow of conflict and the supreme trial of courage, come involuntarily the hurried appraisal of life

CLOSE-UPS OF A NATION'S TRIBUTE TO ITS WAR DEAD

WASHINGTON.—Long before the rising sun broke through a low bank of clouds long columns of soldiers, sailors and marines today began making their way to the capitol plaza there to receive into their keeping America's unknown soldier and to accompany him to his final resting place at Arlington. The day promised to be clear and sharply cool—an almost exact duplication of the first armistice day, three years ago. There was scarcely a breath of wind stirring and the half-masted flags everywhere about the capitol hung virtually stationary. Just as the first of the sun's beams touched the statue of Liberty surmounting the capitol dome beneath which lay the unknown soldier and stood his unceasing guard, sharp commands began to ring out about the capitol as portions of the military escort began to take their places.

Historic Pennsylvania avenue, to see a new tribute to a nation's dead, was roped off and all traffic stopped as when an inaugural parade passes over its board way. Before sunrise spectators began to line the sides of the avenue.

As the east door of the rotunda swung open there entered the first flood of sunshine and lighted the bronze figure sent by president of China, resting on the base. The body bearers lifted the coffin and then put it back. It was a rest. The mountain of flowers, stacked high against the walls and in a circle on stands closer in, remained undisturbed over night.

As the house delegation marched out and took up its position behind the senate, Representative Alice Robertson of Oklahoma the only woman in congress, took her place up near the front dressed in the uniform of an American Red Cross nurse. A soldier was detailed to march with her. The procession moved out of the capitol grounds at 8:22 o'clock.

By a general order every officer and man of the army and navy who took part wore his medals and decorations. There were no foreign decorations to be seen. The distinguished service cross, the distinguished service medal, the Victory medal and tokens that spoke of high deeds in older wars, alone were evidence.

A fringe of Boy Scouts, armed with white staffs, and also police stood close along the ropes that held back the quiet crowds as the funeral train moved along at shorter step than the army knows, because of the old men who defied infirmities of age to walk behind the nation's nameless one of fame.

Six black horses with drivers rigid in the saddle, drew the funeral car. On the gun limber, the simple flag-wrapped casket rode high with only a handful of flowers and tokens that have been lavished to deck it. Among them lay the withered cluster of French blossoms that had come with him on the journey home.

The president and the man who led the American armies oversees walked almost alone. The president was clad in black mourning dress with silk hat and marched step for step with General Pershing, who wore of his many war decorations only the victory medal that every comrade of the war may wear. Former President Wilson was to have come next in line according to program, but having arrived late at the start he took a place farther back. Riding in a carriage with Mrs. Wilson, the former president joined the procession as it swung around the north end of the capitol. As he turned into Pennsylvania avenue the crowds along the way cheered him.

It was 9:15 o'clock when the head of the procession reached the white house. When the caisson had passed, President Harding turned out of his place in the line and after passing through the executive offices went to the front of the white house grounds to review the remainder of the line as it passed on its way to Arlington. The president later took a motor car for the amphitheater. While the president was reviewing the procession there came a moment's delay and he stepped into the street and shook hands with the medal of honor men. When Former President Wilson passed in his carriage, Mr. Harding saluted him by taking off his hat and the former President returned the salute. The crowd cheered.

The reverent silence all along the line had only been broken by handclapping and some cheering as Former President Wilson passed by. After passing the white house Mr. Wilson's carriage turned out of the procession and drove him home.

It was Mr. Wilson's first public appearance since March 4 when he rode up Pennsylvania avenue with President Harding. The comment was heard in the crowd that the former president, long a sick man, looked better than many folk expected.

Although many of the notables followed President Harding's lead and turned out of the procession at the white house, General Pershing with Secretary Weeks and Secretary Denby, however, continued in the long march to Arlington. While the remainder of the procession was winding its way to Arlington the great amphitheater was filling with the guests invited to the ceremony. The body was to arrive there; according to program, at 11:15 o'clock.

LIVESTOCK MEN ADOPT PLAN FOR MARKET SYSTEM

CHICAGO, Ill.—Livestock producers, gathered here Friday, adopted the plan for national co-operative marketing system, prepared by a committee of fifteen appointed by J. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau federation.

The plan, according to Mr. Howard: "Sets up farmer-owned and controlled livestock commission houses at the Stock Yards; provides a plan for orderly marketing so as to prevent gluts on the market and the consequent sharp declines in price, and represents the natural development of the co-operative livestock shipping association movement."

BADGER SUICIDES IN WEST

ANACONDA, Mont.—William Hogan, 51, an iron moulder and former secretary of the Iron Moulders' union at Spokane, committed suicide by hanging himself in the garage in the rear of his home here Thursday night.

Despondency had dominated Hogan's actions for severmal months, his wife said. The body will be sent to Racine, Wis., where Mrs. Morris Schultz, sister of the deceased, lives.

SOLDIER HOME FROM FRANCE LAID TO REST

America's Unknown Warrior Interred at Arlington in Soil of France for Which He Died

PRESIDENT WALKS IN FUNERAL PROCESSION AS CHIEF MOURNER

Great Folk of the Nation Join Humbly With Lesser Citizens to Honor War Dead

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Home at last from France, an unknown American soldier was laid to rest with all the homage a grateful people could pay.

For him a people stood at pause a little space, the rush and tumult of a nation's hurrying life stilled in reverence.

For him a president gladly trudged afoot through the streets, chief mourner, to tell a people's proud sorrow for the dead.

For him admirals and generals and judges and statesmen flung off the weight of dignities and years to walk humbly with lesser folk and do him honor.

For him the world's most precious tokens for the valiant were laid upon his bier; crosses and medals and ribbons and the tears of mourning mothers; comrades standing apart among men for their high-hearted deeds of courage alone might touch his casket; cannon roared him a last glorious salute.

A Tomb Fit for Kings

And for him, a shattered, nameless body from some battle field in France where his great sacrifice was made, was provided a place for his long sleep that "kings for such a tomb could wish to die." Yet in it all, after all, there was little of sorrow. There was pride and circumstance and the ordered movement of martial pageant; but over and under it all there was everywhere a note that spoke of the swelling spirit of brotherhood of the nation, the democracy that brought the highest and lowest shoulder to shoulder about the tomb of the unknown soldier who gave his all for the flag.

There was nothing lacking in the spectacle. From the moment when a November dawn peered in through the high windows of the capitol rotunda where the dead soldier lay in state, until the shock of a battery salute rocked the hills over the river to proclaim that the dead had come at last to his final rest, nothing that the human mind could devise or human hands contrive to do this soldier honor, had been left undone.

No Ceremonies at Capital

There were no ceremonies at the rotunda where the body had lain in state since Wednesday afternoon. A few minutes before eight o'clock the band outside played "Nearer My God To Thee" and the coffin was lifted upon the shoulders of the body-bearers and taken through the east doors to the caisson. The honorary pall-bearers followed. As the body was removed the soldier guard of honor that had stood about the bier since night before last broke ranks.

As the flower strewn casket was borne tenderly down the broad steps of the capitol, soldiers stationed in line along the steps and the assemblage of thousands on the plaza stood at "Attention." Flags of the color bearers were drooped, while those on the capitol were half-mast.

Climb Hill to Arlington

After winding its way between the long lines of a reverent multitude in the streets of the capital, the funeral procession toiled up the long hill leading to Arlington arriving at the main gates a little after eleven o'clock. The invited guests long before had begun to assemble within the white marble walls of the amphitheater overlooking the Potomac and the capitol itself nestling in the blue haze of a fall day. The invited guests, including great chieftains of the war, were seated in the boxes and on the long rows of marble benches, and thousands were standing. Thousands more stood outside or anywhere, merely to be near.

Just before 11:15 o'clock the caisson bearing the flag-draped coffin rolled up to the west entrance and was removed by the body bearers. Preceded by the choir and the clergy it was borne tenderly along through the west entrance around the right colonnade to the apse and was placed on the catafalque. The great audience rose and stood uncovered as it passed in, followed by General Pershing and the distinguished officers of the army and navy, as mourners.

Allied War Leaders There

Marshal Foch, accompanied by his staff, came in with all his war medals across his breast. General Jacques, the Belgian chief, also came and the two strolled about the marble

RUSSIAN KIDDIES FACE PROSPECT OF SWEETLESS YULE

Sugar Crop is Short, Amounting to Only Two Pounds Per Person

PETROGRAD.—Christmas will bring but little candy or other sweets to Russian children. In fact a great percentage of them will not even have enough black bread, much less ginger cookies and chocolate eclairs.

Russia's sugar crop this year amounted to only slightly more than 200,000,000 pounds, for 120,000,000 persons—less than two pounds for each person. And the importation of sugar is practically nil.

These figures are from the official reports of the government. The Russian pound is only 12 ounces, or one-fourth less than the American pound. Consequently the sugar crop for this year is not much in excess of 150,000,000 American pounds.

In pre-war days Russia used to export about as much sugar as it now produces, and its annual production was over 20 times what it is today. The population was about 180,000,000 before Poland, Finland, the Baltic states, Georgia, Armenia and parts of Siberia were created into new governments. So in pre-war days there was a per capita consumption of over 20 Russian pounds of sugar annually.

and the contemplation of death's great mystery.

Hoped for Victory

"On the threshold of eternity many a soldier, I can well believe, wondered how his ebbing blood would color the stream of human life, flowing on after his sacrifice. His patriotism was none less if he craved more than triumph of country; rather, it was greater if he hoped for a victory for all human kind. Indeed, I revere that citizen whose confidence in the righteousness of his country inspired belief that its triumph is the victory of humanity.

"This American soldier went forth to battle with no hatred for any people in the world, but hating war, hating the purpose of every war for conquest. He cherished our national rights and abhorred the threat of armed domination; and in the maelstrom of destruction and suffering and death he fired his shot for liberation of the captive conscience of the world, in advancing toward his objective was somewhere a thought of a world awakened; and we are here to testify undying gratitude and reverence for that thought of a wider freedom.

Make a Better Republic

"On such an occasion as this, amid such a scene, our thoughts alternate between defenders living and defenders dead. A grateful republic will be worthy of them both. Our part is to atone for the losses of heroic dead by making a better republic for the living.

"Sleeping in these hallowed grounds are thousands of Americans who have given their blood for the baptism of freedom and its maintenance, armed exponents of the nation's conscience. It is better and nobler for their deeds. Burial here is rather more than a sign of the government's favor, it is a suggestion of a tomb in the heart of the nation sorrowing for its noble dead.

Unknown, But No Unsung

"Today's ceremonies proclaim that the hero unknown is not unhonored. We gather him to the nation's breast, within the shadow of the capitol, of the towering shaft that honors Washington, the great father, and of the exquisite monument to Lincoln, the martyred savior. Here the inspirations of yesterday and the consciences of today forever unite to make the [illegible] by of his death for flag and country.

"[illegible]fty resolutions today, as [illegible] to the dead we consecrate ourselves to a better order for the living. With all my heart I wish we might say to the defenders who survive, to mothers who sorrow, to widows and children who mourn, that no such sacrifice shall be asked again.

Modern Warfare is Cruel

"It was my fortune recently to see a demonstration of modern warfare. It is no longer a conflict in chivalry, no more a test of militant manhood. It is only cruel, deliberate, scientific destruction. There was no contending enemy, only the theoretic defense of a hypothetic objective. But the attack was made with all the relentless methods of modern destruction. There was the rain of ruin from the aircraft, the thunder of artillery followed by the unspeakable devastation wrought by bursting shells; there were mortars belching their bombs of desolation; machine guns concentrating their leaden storms; there was the infantry advancing, firing and falling—like men with souls sacrificing for the decision. The flying missiles were revealed by illuminating tracers so that we could note their flight and appraise their deadliness. The air was streaked with tiny flames marking the flight of massed destruction; while the effectiveness of the theoretical defense was impressed by the simulation of dead and wounded among those going forward, undaunted and unheeding. As this panorama of unutterable destruction visualized the horrors of modern conflict there grew on me the sense of the failure of a civilization which can leave its problems to such cruel arbitrament. Surely no one in authority with human attributes and full appraisal of the patriotic loyalty of his countrymen, could ask the manhood of kingdom, empire or republic to make such sacrifice until all reason had failed, until appeal to justice through understanding had been denied, until every effort of love and consideration for fellowmen had been exhausted, until freedom itself and inviolate honor had been brutally threatened.

Give Citizens Peace

"I speak not as a pacifist fearing war, but as one who loves justice and hates war. I speak as one who believes the highest function of government is to give its citizens the security of peace, the opportunity to achieve and the pursuit of happiness.

"The loftiest tribute we can bestow today—a heroically earned tribute—fashioned in deliberate conviction, out of unclouded thought, neither shadowed by remorse nor made vain by fancies, is the commitment of this republic to an advancement never made before. If American achievement is a cherished pride at home, if our unselfishness among nations is all we wish it to be and ours is a helpful example in the world, then let us give of our influence and strength, yea, of our aspirations and convictions, to put mankind on a little higher plane, exulting and exalting, with war's distressing and depressing tragedies barred from the stage of righteous civilization.

"There have been a thousand defenses justly and patriotically made; a thousand offenses which reason and righteousness ought to have stayed. Let us beseech all men to join us in seeking the rule under which reason and righteousness shall prevail.

Sacrifice Not Vain

"Standing today on hallowed ground, conscious that all America has halted to share in the tribute of heart and mind and soul to this fellow American, and knowing that the world is noting this expression of the republic's mindfulness, it is fitting to say that his sacrifice, and that of the millions dead, shall not be vain. There must be, there shall be, a commanding voice of a conscious civilization again armed warfare.

"As we return this poor clay to its mother soil, garlanded by love and covered with the decorations that only nations can bestow, I sense the prayers of our people, of our peoples, that this Armistice Day shall mark the day of a new and lasting era of peace on earth, good will among men. Let me join in that prayer.

"Our Father Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, for Thine is Thy Kingdom, and the Power and Glory forever, Amen."

Beware

One town in New York state has signs for autoists that will probably be copied by other towns and villages. They are directed at the driver of the car. One of them reads:

"Drive slow and see our town. Drive fast and see our jail."

Another reads: "Drive carefully. It only takes a little longer. Let the rest of us live as long as we can."

Point of Interest Screened

The haunts of the dinosaur in the Red Deer valley, in Canada, have been screened by the department of trade and commerce. The place where these relics of millions of years ago are found is about 100 miles east of Calgary in a canyon of the Red Deer valley, which is just as beautiful as the Grand canyon, but about one seventh its size. It is the only place in Alberta where the cactus grows.

Pals

Ethel, age seven, had disobeyed her mother, and as a result was severely spanked. After the girl had had her "cry," she walked into the next room where her mother was sitting, threw her arms around her and said:

"Mother, you and I are pals; we don't care anything about spankin', do we?" And mother could not restrain a smile.

Three meals a day—yet thousands are underfed

Are you getting the full benefit from the food you eat?

SCIENCE has made a discovery of far-reaching importance to every human being. We know now that thousands are slowly starving even on three meals a day.

It has been found that our food cannot furnish the life, the vital energy we need if it is short in one single element called vitamine. This is why Fleischmann's Yeast has such a new and startling importance in our diet, for yeast is the richest known source of this vital food factor.

Today thousands are eating Fleischmann's Yeast and gaining strength and vigor from its remarkable health-giving qualities.

Many physicians and hospitals prescribe Fleischmann's Yeast for undernourishment, skin eruptions, boils and constipation. It builds up the body tissues, makes them more resistant to disease.

In addition, because of its freshness (you get it fresh daily) it helps the intestines in their elimination of poisonous waste matter.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast at any time—2 to 3 cakes a day. Have it on the table at home. Have it at your office and eat it at your desk. Ask for it at noontime at your lunch place. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor and the clean, wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth. Only one precaution: if troubled with gas, dissolve the yeast first in very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast.

Order from your grocer a fresh daily supply of Fleischmann's Yeast. Send 4c in stamps for the valuable new booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington Street, New York, N. Y.

The need for scientifically tested yeast

Fresh yeast has been proved by recent scientific tests to be a valuable food for correcting run-down condition, constipation, indigestion and certain skin disorders. These original tests were all made with Fleischmann's Yeast. Beware of untested yeast-vitamine preparations that contain drugs or other mixtures. Fleischmann's Yeast (fresh) is a pure food, rich in vitamine, in which it measures up to the high standards set by laboratories and hospitals. The familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label is the only form in which Fleischmann's Yeast for Health is sold.

Cease Firing!

THE last shot of the World War was fired three years ago today. Today the unknown American soldier, symbolic of a host of others, is buried in Arlington cemetery. A meeting of representatives of the great powers, called to limit armaments and head off a "next war," begins in Washington.

This conference is the really important thing. The war is gone—its physical and soul anguish passing into the mists of history, though its scars on the human race will not be effaced for centuries.

A peculiar defect of man's brain is that it is so easy to forget. Every person in the world should refresh his memory and write in his brain with indelible pencil these two facts:

FIRST: The most authoritative statistics on the World War show that about 10,000,000 were killed in battle. Countless millions perished through the indirect causes of the conflict.

SECOND: The war's actual cost to all participating nations as compiled by Prof. Bogart of the University of Illinois, totaled $186,000,000,000.

With these terrible facts fresh before the eyes, it is a deplorable reflection on so-called human intelligence that it is ever necessary to call a disarmament conference.

If this conference fails, the World War—as far as our generation and the next are concerned—was fought in vain.

Whatever the difficulties, however hard it may prove to reach disarmament, at least the conference must not fail. If it cannot surmount all obstacles now, it must make what progress is possible and leave the way open for renewed efforts as soon as the world is ready for them.

Failure, ultimate and definitive failure, is unthinkable.

Morgan

IN an interview Sunday Attorney General William G. Morgan emphasized an interesting side of the recent recall election in North Dakota. It was that the successful independents were opposed by both the Nonpartisans and the extreme reactionaries, and beat the combination. The proof of this lies not only in statements of reporters, but in the fact that Fargo, home of McKenzie, famous as the stalwart "boss" of North Dakota, beat the independent ticket by upwards of 6,000 votes. The incident discloses again the old reactionary theory that sane progressivism is more dangerous to the intrenchments of "predatory capitalism" than is extreme radicalism, because the latter trips upon its own whiskers and defeats its own ends.

One paragraph in Mr. Morgan's interview invites speculation as to its significance. It is that in which the attorney general asked whether there is impending in this state a combination of extreme radicals and extreme conservatives bent on "playing both ends against the middle" as they did in North Dakota? If by this Mr. Morgan meant to imply that, if necessary to defeat him for governor, the Committee of Forty-four and the La Follette-Nonpartisan coalition might make common cause, it would appear that there exists a rift between the attorney general and the group which is headed by former Senator Otto Bosshard of La Crosse. Mr. Morgan has had nothing to do with the Committee of Forty-four. He may regard some of its affiliates as dangerous, and prefer to make his own race, even at the risk of competition on both flanks. Should he meet with success in prosecuting his litigation against illegal combinations in Wisconsin, he might be able to furnish the fireworks for a campaign as exciting as any of the many spectacular contests that have enlivened the Badger state in the past twenty years. Whatever Mr. Morgan's plans, they are not apt easily to be altered by pressure from without, for the attorney general has exhibited little reverence for the authority of party organization.

Whether the Committee of Forty-four, as the only alternative, will eventually surrender the gubernatorial field to Mr. Morgan, and confine itself to other offices, is fair speculation. With Senator La Follette standing for re-election, and with an inoffensive administration among his assets, Governor Blaine is going to be a more than ordinarily formidable contender. That with Mr. Morgan and a candidate of the Committee of Forty-four in the field his nomination would appear to be assured as against ordinary methods is a fact that will escape neither Mr. Morgan nor the Committee of Forty-four. Perhaps it was as a backfire against such a situation that Mr. Morgan dropped his hint about a possible reactionary combination with the Blaine forces. If so his meaning is plain. It is that he recognizes that his one chance would be to sell the idea that the two opposing candidates represented a reactionary-radical combination to beat "the only public official in Wisconsin who dared to lay a hand upon big business." The prospect, if such it is, promises to give this state "a high old time."

A Great Enterprise

TODAY is a momentous day in world history. It is the anniversary of the peace. It is signalized by the opening of an international conference which aims to make peace, not an interval between wars, but a permanent condition. With this conference rests the hope of the nations that in the last war was won the first real victory achieved in any war—the victory of humanity over war. If success attends, next to the day that gave birth to the Christ, who made it possible, the greatest anniversary in all history will be Armistice Day.

But the Armistice Day conference alone can not rid the world of war. Its covenants of today may be broken tomorrow, if peoples again turn to savagery. The thing that today makes a disarmament agreement perhaps possible is the will of the peoples, weary of its red menace, to be rid of war. What we do now is largely the moment's reaction to the near presence of a great horror. The stability of what we do must find its permanent support in the minds and hearts of men and women. It must be founded in character and thus become a fixed human aspiration.

And so it is important that everywhere society shall support the disarmament conference by making fast the security of what the world hopes will be accomplished. We must take the philosophy of the conference into the community and the home. Our daily lives must be of the material of peace. Our citizenship, as we inherit it or transmit it to newcomers, must be the citizenship of peace. Consciousness of race, nativity and group must give way to consciousness of a common humanity to be exalted for all alike by obedience to the better impulses and pursuit of the finer ideals. What the disarmament conference can at most start, must live on, if at all, in the quality of the domestic and public life of the peoples.

In Ye Olden Times

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY

Leonard Lothridge, pioneer editor and journalist at the time "Brick" Pomeroy was prominent in this city, died at his daughter's home in West Salem this morning. Mr. Lothridge was appointed postmaster of La Crosse by Abraham Lincoln and held that office for many years. He has held many other appointive offices. For many years he owned and operated the Neshonoc flour and grist mill. He organized the La Crosse County Bank at West Salem in 1889 as sole proprietor and prospered. He retired in 1904.

At last night's council session the law requiring peddlers to have a license was repealed, a bridge was ordered built to Isle La Plume from the foot of Market street and the purchase of two automobiles for the use of the police and fire departments authorized. The council also decided that hereafter organizations wishing to use the council chamber for meetings will be required to pay a fee of $2.50 to the janitor.

Interested by balls of green fire that appeared to be shining at him Joe Wolford, 1616 Vine street, started toward them, thinking they were the eyes of a big owl. He was hunting near Rice Lake on French Island. The object sprang at him and he saw it was a large wildcat. Wolford was out of ammunition and took to his heels. Inhabitants of the island intend to start an organized hunt with rifles and dogs to destroy the animal.

A Forgotten Engagement

BY R. RAY BAKER

While Marjorie Crandall sat at a window, a book dangling from a limp hand, and with wistful eyes watched the stars struggle forth into the gathering night, her father, Ben Crandall, rocked by the stove and read of Black Jim Simpson's lawless depredations.

No sound disturbed the dusk except the piping of a tree-toad and the creaking of Mr. Crandall's chair. Marjorie had sat by that window much of late, in a pensive mood, with her mind far away, at race tracks, where demons in motor cars annihilated time and sometimes tossed a human life aside.

Her father always occupied the creaky chair by the stove at this time of day. The stove was dead, because summer was here and almost ready to depart, but it was his custom to huddle near it, forever reading a paper.

"That rascal Black Jim is at it again," Mr. Crandall observed aloud. "And he's not so far away. He seems to be edging toward Happy Valley and I'm feeling a little bit scared, although there would be nothing here to interest him."

Marjorie scarcely heard him. Her thoughts were of her racing demon, Harry Trenton, and she had a vague hope that he might keep the big engagement; very vague, indeed; for Harry was now famous and would not be likely to remember his sweetheart of a year ago.

The big engagement was made early in September a year ago, while Marjorie and Harry sat in Belle Isle park, in Detroit, having motored thither in his rattletrap, made over auto of veteran service, which had been purchased for less than a song and given a racing appearance by means of some clever body work. At that time Harry was mechanic in a Detroit automobile factory but the racing fever had gripped him and he was resolved to make a name for himself on the speedways.

On the September day Harry had proposed marriage. Marjorie loved him and was exceedingly romantic, but there was a practical side to her nature and this asserted itself. Harry was not in proper financial circumstances to care for a wife, so she advised that they wait a year before becoming engaged.

"All right," Harry sighed. "Make it a year—a year from today. On that date I'll call on you for my answer."

This appealed to Marjorie's romantic propensities.

"Exactly a year from today," she said. "But," she added as an afterthought, "perhaps we shall be far apart by that time."

"It makes no difference," he assured her. "No matter where you are, I will keep that engagement. And in the meantime, we'll never refer to it again. Neither of us is to be reminded, for if, we continue to care we'll remember. One year from today, if we are both living, I shall call on you for my answer."

Within a month Marjorie moved away. Her father's health suddenly had failed and his physician advised outdoor life. They went to North Dakota where Mr. Crandall invested in a small farm.

Marjorie and Harry corresponded, but as time went on and he began forging ahead in the business of motor racing, the letters became more and more irregular.

The date of the big engagement was now only two days away, but Marjorie entertained little hope as she sat by the window and pondered. Fame had taken Harry from her, she was afraid, for it had been more than a month since last she heard from him.

How dead everything was in the valley! Happy Valley! How she loathed it! No, she did not quite feel that way, because it had restored her father's health. But Marjorie's romanticism did not thrill to lonesome places. Crowds of people, glittering electric lights, appealed to her. She was unhappy in Happy Valley, especially as the day for the big engagement drew near; for it meant disappointment, she was almost sure.

The night before that day dawned Marjorie was alone. Her father had found it necessary to go to Bismarck on business, and he would be gone several days.

"Watch out for Black Jim," he admonished as he hopped into his flivver, in which he would drive thirty miles to a railway station. "I hate to leave you alone like this, but the business can't wait and somebody must stay to look after the stock. I guess Big Jim is after bigger game than his little piece of land, anyhow.

"And don't fall into the well—and take care of your cold. Your voice sounds like an auctioneer's after a week of hard work. I'd never recognize it as yours if I didn't know."

The well was a hole in the ground, where Mr. Crandall was drilling for a new water supply. Water had not yet been reached, but indications were that it was near.

Marjorie promised to heed her father's warnings and he drove away. Until late in the night Marjorie sat up and tried to read, then finally went sobbing to bed, reconciled to disappointment on the morrow.

In the morning she arose early, and her first action was to gaze down the road in both directions. No cloud of dust rewarded her wistful watching—no indication of the approach of a racing car.

She sighed and went toward the barn, but had not reached her destination when she stopped, startled. A riderless horse stood by the hole in the ground—a jet black horse.

Marjorie hurried to the well, and as she neared it she heard faint, hoarse cries. She stood close to the edge, but was careful to stand back out of sight of anybody that might be in the depths. She was not anxious to be the target for a revolver.

"Help!" cried the voice more rasping than her own. "Get me out!"

Marjorie patted the horse, and a terrifying idea flashed into her mind. "It's Black Jim!" she trembled. "It's his horse and he was preparing to rob the farm. Evidently he dismounted right into the well in the dark. Let him out? I guess not. Here's where I earn a reward."

The prisoner of the well pleaded in vain, in tones scarcely audible. He endeavored to make explanations, but a night of shouting, which went unheard, evidently had all but robbed him of the power of speech. In the hole he remained. Marjorie lowered food on the end of a clothes line, but she warned him she would let go if he tried to climb out. The day passed and Marjorie kept busy. The duties about the farm consumed considerable time, and there was the prisoner to feed and the road to watch. She put the outlaw's horse in a stall and looked after its wants, as she did those of its owner. The latter by this time had lost his voice entirely, but he accepted the food.

That night Marjorie cried herself to sleep, because the big engagement had not been kept. She felt secure, in spite of the bandit's proximity, because there was no chance that he could climb out of the well, but she took care to bolt all the doors.

The next day Marjorie continued to feed the prisoner and watch the road, but no motor car of any description, much less a racer, appeared. She wished someone would come, to relieve her of Black Jim.

On the following day her father returned.

"I have a surprise for you," she announced, after he had kissed her. "Black Jim is my prisoner—in the well."

Mr. Crandall whistled and looked skeptical, but he procured a revolver and went to the well, lowering a rope.

"Climb out!" he called. "But don't try any funny business or I'll shoot."

Marjorie and her father hauled away at the rope, and presently a head appeared in the hole, and then a whole man appeared.

"Harry!" Marjorie rasped, her voice still affected by the cold. "Why, how—the horse—your car—"

Harry grinned ruefully, as he tried to brush slime from his clothes. "I tried to keep the date," he said in a whisper. "but I got lost. I came across your house, but I didn't suspect you lived here. I thought I'd ask the way, so I dismounted—right into the well. I've ridden a hundred miles to keep our engagement, and I've lost my voice shouting for help. Car, did you say? Why, don't you know I'm on a vacation—and driving an automobile is work!"

AN "AIR FORD'S" RECORD

How long does an airplane last?

It depends; but this most common of all questions asked by groundlings is answered amazingly by an air mail plane which has been constantly in the hardest service for three and a half years, or since the air mail service was begun. It has flown more than forty-two thousand miles and has delivered tons of mail, hundreds of thousands of letters.

Air mail plane No. 12 has just been shown at the Minnesota state fair and it has been proposed to house it as a historic relic at the Smithsonian institution.

It is the type the fliers call "the Ford of the air," being a Curtiss "Jinnie," or JN4H, with a 150-horsepower Hispano Suiza motor. It has a carrying capacity of two hundred pounds, of eight thousand letters, carries forty gallons of gasoline, and has a cruising radius of three and a half hours at seventy-five miles an hour. "Old Jinnie" made the initial air mail trip between Washington and New York on May 15, 1918.

Contrasted with this ship the newer type carries one thousand pounds and has a cruising radius of five and a half hours at a maximum speed of nearly two miles a minute. They are De Havilland bombers, rebuilt for mail carrying.

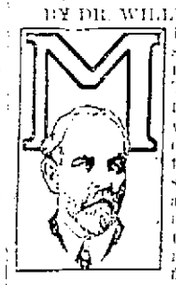

Surplus war airplanes of the type of the "Jinnie" are on the market for as little $750—Kansas City Star.

Falling Stars

BY DR. WILLIAM E. BARTON

METEORS are constantly falling from the sky to the earth. There is no hour of the day or night when they are not dropping. Only meteors of exceptional size and brilliancy are visible during the day, but many of them may be seen at night. Their rapid fall through the earth's atmosphere heats them white hot, and they are often consumed by their own heat before they reach the ground.

On the morning of November 13, 1833, occurred the most notable exhibition of falling stars recorded in the history of the United States. Most middle-aged persons have met one or more old people who witnessed this phenomenon.

I have met men who declared that the stars have never been so thick since that night. This, of course, was all in their imagination. None of the fixed stars or planets fell then or ever fail in these meteoric displays.

This notable exhibit was witnessed by Prof. Dennison Olmstead of Yale, who wrote:

"Probably no celestial phenomenon has ever occurred in this country since its first settlement which was viewed with so much admiration and delight by one class of spectators or with so much fear and astonishment by another class."

To the scientific observer, such an event means the passage of the earth in her orbit through a spot in the solar system where it encounters an unusual number of fragments of what may once have been a planet or might yet go toward the making of one, if the material were sufficient.

The earth's mass must be greatly increased by the weight of these bodies, and the number that fall into the sun must be vast, and may have no small part in furnishing it fuel.

There is nothing to fear on nights when stars fall in unusual number, nor does any especial religious significance attach to the event. The laws governing the fall of these bodies are well known, and some of the places in the earth's orbit, where they are thickest, are definitely charted and the annual recurrence of the event clearly predicted.

Not all of them are thus located, and surprises occur. When they come they may be studied or enjoyed without fear. Falling stars are not stars, and their fall leaves no vacant space in the galaxy of the heavens.

The real stars are still doing business at the old stand. The stars are reliable.

SCHOOL STUDY SPORTS THE BOYS AND GIRLS NEWSPAPER HUMOR PLAY WORK

JIMMY GETS A BOOK

"I don't want any dry old books," said Jimmy. "I like stories about boys that have interesting adventures and come up in the world."

"Well," smiled the librarian, "here is a story about an English boy, Oliver Twist, who was born in a poorhouse. He was very cruelly treated and half-starved. While he was still a small boy he was apprenticed to an undertaker. He stood the unkind treatment of the undertaker's family as long as he could, then he 'beat up' the tormenting son of his master, and ran away to London.

"In London he was picked up by a gang of thieves who tried to make a pickpocket out of him. He managed to get away from them and was taken in by a kind old gentleman. But the thieves wanted the boy, because he was quick and small. So they captured him and brought him back.

"Sykes, one of the leaders of the robber band, was planning a big robbery in the country near London and he decided that the boy would be useful to him, so he took him along." The librarian turned the pages of the book in her hands. "I'll read you a little about it."

"'Now listen, you young limb,' whispered Sykes, drawing a dark lantern from his pocket and throwing the gleam full on Oliver's face. 'I'm a going to put you through there. Take this light, go softly up the steps straight afore you, and along the little hall to the street door, unfasten it, and let us in.'

"'There's a bolt on the door you won't be able to reach,' interposed Toby. 'Stand upon one of the hall chairs.'

"Sykes put Oliver gently through the window with his feet first, and, without leaving hold of his collar, planted him safely on the floor inside, and advised him to take notice that he was within shot all the way and that if he faltered he would fall dead that instant.'

"What happened to Oliver in the house," continued the librarian, closing the book, "is part of the story of 'Oliver Twist.' It is one of the interesting books by Charles Dickens, and isn't one bit dr—"

"I'll take it," interrupted Jimmy, eagerly.

"That boy is incurably lazy," said the teacher to the principal, pointing out Samuel. "I told him yesterday to write a composition on the Mississippi river. He wanted to know if he couldn't change it to the Penobscot."

"Why?"

"Too many i's to dot."

MORE FORWARD PASSING

Written especially for this newspaper by
Lawrence Walquist
Captain, University of Illinois Football Team

In forward passing, speed, accuracy and confidence are the main assets. By speed I mean getting the ball away fast. The passer should, in practice, develop this speed and accuracy so that when it comes to a game both are second nature to him.

Emphasis on getting the ball away quickly cannot be made too strong, especially on short passes. A little more time is necessary on the longer passes so as to enable the runner to "get free."

Accuracy comes from constant practice. Judging the runner's speed and leading him the right distance is of vital importance. The passer should practice individually with all men who are going to do the receiving.

ONE REEL YARNS

THE CLINTON ARMISTICE

All fall the school at Clinton had been divided into two sides, Randy Hoskins and Bob Benton, two of the most poular boys in school, had quarrelled at the beginning of the year, and every one seemed to have lined up with one boy or the other.

On the playground and athletic field the trouble continued. Members of one gang would have nothing to do with the other. Several times there had been fist-fighting and some older person had to interfere. The principal, who tried hard to change the spirit of the school, finally was in despair.

Then he went to see Randy's older brother, who had been overseas, and the two hit upon a plan.

Armistice Day the school planned to have a program. Nearly everyone was to take some part. An elaborate drill was being planned, under the direction of Randy's older brother. The Bob Benton gang were angry at having to be drilled by one of the family of their rival. However, Bob, who had lost a brother in the war, finally fell in with the plan and helped to prepare the program.

The program went off like clockwork. Just before the big drill, which was to end the entertainment, the principal stood up and made a little talk on the meaning of Armistice Day. Then he said, "We have planned a little armistice day of our own, so the big Armistice Day may have a special meaning for us. Our armistice is to last for a year, and I am sure that at the end of that time peace will be permanent."

Just as he finished speaking, Randy Hoskins and Bob Benton, grinning a little foolishly, stepped out from their places in line for the drill. They shook hands, while the whole school looked on in amazement. Then together they led off the drill.

Something Burning

At a summer camp, two girls shared an upstairs sleeping porch.

One, never having been very far from the comforts of home, knew very little about some of the "wonders of nature."

"Waking, one night, she became aware of a most unusual odor. Sitting up, she called out: "Mildred, Mildred, I smell something burning! I am going down stairs to see about it."

Experienced Mildred drawled: "Lie down, Betty, and go to sleep. That's nothing but a skunk."

INSECT POWDER AND PATIENCE NEEDED BY TOURISTS IN RUSSIA

Former Will be Needed Long Before the Traveler Even Reaches Sovietland

VISITORS CONFRONTED WITH FORMIDABLE QUESTIONNAIRE

Then Comes Endurance Test Before Traveler Can Proceed

PETROGRAD.—Americans, who contemplate a trip to Soviet Russia, would do well to equip themselves with an abundance of insect powder, patience, optimism, warm clothing, money and canned heat.

They will need the insect powder long before they get to Russia. Bed bugs and cooties have taken a great liking to the railway cars and hotels in Poland, Lithuania, Latvia and Esthonia. They also enjoy life on the Baltic ships.

Consequently it is difficult to reach either Riga or Reval, the two gateways to Soviet Russia, without encountering the crawling cordon.

Filtering into Russia is a slow process. It is no job for nervous and impatient folks. Those who go to Reval to get permission from the Bolshevist authorities usually wish they had gone to Riga. Accommodating Danes have established an airline between the two ports for uneasy folk who desire to ease down their nerves by flying back and forth and rapping at both entries. It takes two hours to make the flight, while the railway trip consumes 24 hours. And so far vermin have not shown any liking for this air route.

The Bolshevist legations at Reval and Riga present prospective visitors to Moscow with a formidable questionaire in Russian, including such inquiries as:

Must Answer Many Questions

"What kind of immovable property do you own, if any? Describe it?

"What are your political views? Are you a member of a party in any country? Did you participate in the great war? What is your religion?"

These questions are all pretty difficult for the ordinary bourgeois American, who is a good bit of a political mugswamp and hasn't much religion, but is anxious to say the thing which will facilitate his entry and not stretch the truth too violently.

One hears on all sides that the Bolshevists have been deceived so often by pretended liberals that even a socialist of the parlor variety is apt to be scrutinized more carefully than an applicant who doesn't assume to be sympathetic with Bolshevist ideals. In sheer desperation "Republican" is written down in the hope that Moscow will offset Mr. Harding's position on Russian recognition by the fact that Senator France is enrolled with Karl Marx among the immortals and Secretary of Commerce Hoover is feeding a million Russian children.

Then one lustily inscribes himself as a Methodist or a Presbyterian or Episcopalian. It is difficult to lib about one's church affiliations, even to facilitate entry into a land controlled by a government which scoffs at religion.

Secret Service Ubiquitous

There is a great temptation to enroll as a draft evader. That ought to be a guarantee of a speedy entry into a land which doesn't believe in any wars except those it makes itself. But the new Russian secret service is more omniscient than that of the late Czar, so one admits the truth and prayerfully hands in his paper with the hope that the Moscow examining committee won't flunk him.

Here the endurance test begins. It may last six days. It may last six weeks, or even six months. There are not places on the Moscow train. There are few rooms for strangers in Moscow and Petrograd. Consequently the Soviet government weighs applications carefully and acts slowly. If you are to offer millions to develop Russia, you may get a quick answer.

If you are patient enough the reply from Moscow may arrive before you leave for Berlin or London in desperation. If it is affirmative, peace must be made with the American consul by turning over to him your cherished passport and getting a paper in exchange which induces the Latvian government to permit you to leave Latvia and return.

Pay in U. S. Money

The visé of the Bolshevist legation comes next and a railway ticket is provided by the Bolshvist officials who must be paid in English pounds or American dollars. There is no longer any scoffing at the engravings of George Washington, Ulysses S. Grant, Abraham Lincoln or George V.

If you happen to strike a lucky night you will be given a berth in a French international sleeping car. If it is an off night you will probably get a couchette in a Russian car. But it really doesn't make much difference. They both require the same amount of insect powder.

Your English-speaking companions on the train will probably be an English Quakeress, at least one labor member of the English parliament, who cannot talk without cursing Lloyd George; a Greenwich Village uplifter who is sure the United States will never amount to anything until Jane Adams is elected president and several purposeful looking young Americans, well-fed and happy, headed for the Volga faming area in the hope of making life easier for cold and hungry children.

There will also probably be several vague Americans and Englishmen, possibly some Germans and Swedes, who let it be known discreetly that they represent the largest combinations of capital the world has ever known and are on their way to offer assistance to the Soviet government.

Eating stations are few and of uncertain character. Consequently all travelers carry tea kettles, which they fill at hot water tanks afforded by all larger Latvian and Russian stations. Hard alcohol is produced to beat tinned soup and bully beef, and travelers have a taste of the cooking and dishwashing which is the lot of all foreigners and Russians alike in hotel-less and cafe-less Moscow and Petrograd.

SCHOOLING FOR EVERY CHILD IN PALESTINE IS AIM OF BRITAIN

Government to Establish Fifty New Schools Every Year

JERUSALEM.—The British government which has a mandate over Palestine, has undertaken a plan to place a school within the reach of every child in Palestine. It hopes to accomplish this with a few years.

The purpose is to establish 50 new schools each year, these to be distributed throughout Palestine as the need is greatest. Already hundreds of children are receiving for the first time the benefits of an education.

Before the war, Jerusalem, then a city of some 80,000 inhabitants, could not boast of a single government high school. Even now 70 persons out of every 100 do not know how to read and write.

The path of educational development in Palestine contains one great stumbling block, the lack of cooperation and unity among the different elements of population. The government schools today are attended only by Mohammedans.

There is great need for institutions of higher education. At present, there is not a college in the entire state of 1,000,000 inhabitants. The American university of Beirut, Syria, is the only place open to Palestinians seeking higher education.

The authorities recognize this lack of educational opportunity, but find themselves helpless to remedy it owing to the inability to obtain funds.

There has been a great deal of talk in recent years about establishing a Hebrew university in Jerusalem. Its plans have been drawn and the corner stone has been laid but the money to build it has not been secured and it remains in the realm of things yet to be.

Great Desire For Understanding

I believe that the greatest desire of every human heart in the world is just this: The desire to understand its own experience. That is a hunger that is at the root of all the great religions in the world—of all great emotional activity whatever—the continual hunger of the human heart to get even with its own experience, to put it straight and ordered, so that it can understand instead of bewildered.—John Drinkwater.

Get rid of constipation through the use of Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, and you'll be another and healthier, happier person. The action of Kellogg's Bran is natural—but it is wonderful. If you will eat at least two tablespoonfuls each day you will free yourself from constipation permanently. Chronic cases should eat as much more as necessary for results.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is one of the simplest but one of the most remarkable nature foods. Kellogg's Bran, while delicious as a cereal or with your favorite cereal, sweeps and cleanses and purifies. It clears the intestinal tract in an easy and natural but positive way without irritation or discomfort.

Kellogg's Bran must not be classed with "remedies," or with pills or cathartics, which at best can give but temporary relief, at the same time aggravating the delicate conditions that already exist.

If you or any one in your family or your friends suffer with constipation, Kellogg's Bran will relieve it! It is a revelation! Your physician will indorse Kellogg's Bran for constipation. We guarantee that it will prove effective in the most stubborn, persistent cases. Kellogg's Bran will also clear a pimply complexion and sweeten the breath.

Kellogg's Bran can be used in many appetizing ways besides as a cereal. Put it in raisin bread, or muffins, pancakes, macaroons, etc. See recipes on package.

Kellogg's Bran is especially desirable for children.

HOUSING SHORTAGE ACUTE IN LARGER CITIES OF ITALY

Conditions Reported as Serious There as in United States and Britain

ROME.—Rolf W. Banham, who was head of the Princeton architects who worked on devastated France, thus sums up his observations on a tour of Italy:

"The housing shortage in the big cities is just as serious as in the United States, and in Rome the situation is more severe than in either Paris or London. The cost of building has come down but it has not as yet reached a point where extensive programs for housing have been undertaken. Italy has not suffered from devastation as France has, but is in a similar position to the United States and England in not having kept up the annual increase in housing facilities during the war.

"Hotels are full and every available space has been used for living purposes, but architects with whom I have discussed the matter, feel that the spring will see a change in the situation, for every office seems to have a large number of projects awaiting a favorable time for execution.

"In relation to the value of the dollar in America, prices are low in Italy, but this is due to the fact that the lire is now worth less than one quarter of its normal par value of 20 cents. Before the war the restaurants and cafes were charging 10 lire for a meal, an equivalent of two dollars, whereas now they are asking 75 to 20 lire for the same food, an equivalent of 75 cents to $1.

"This is a condition which exists throughout the country and in every kind of transaction, except in the northern part of Italy were conditions were affected by the high prices in Switzerland and such cities as Milan and Venice have a much higher scale of prices.

"The unemployment situation is not as apparent in Italy as in England and France for there is a greater proportion of the population employed in work done by hand, and throughout the cities of Italy, they are storing up a surplus of hand made goods, such as laces, works of art, fancy leather goods which they are depending upon the influx of tourists to dispose of. Shopkeepers in Milan, Venice, Florence and Rome boast of the large amount of business they have done even during this summer and look forward to the winter for a profitable trade."

CONFERENCE SIDELIGHTS

WASHINGTON.—Japan's delegation at the limitation of armament conference here outranks all others in size; greater even than the combined delegations of Great Britain, France, Italy and China.

It numbers 84, including experts on every military, naval and economic problem that may arise and diplomatic representatives from embassies in every country that will figure in the meeting.

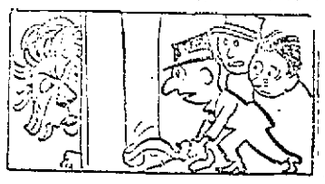

Japan figures on getting down to brass tacks—and she is not leaving any detail in danger through lack of preparation.

* * * *

Washington, during the conference, is the headquarters for all sorts of organizations whose chief aim is twisting the British lion's tail.

Already it is proposed to band these organizations together into an Honorable Association of Imperial Tail Twisters or some such union.

Among those already here are the "Friends of Irish Freedom," the "Association for the Promotion of Irish Independence" and Sailendra Nath Goss, chief propagandist for the Gandhi revolutionists of India.

* * * *

The state department is much concerned over a bevy of parrots in the tropical gardens of the Pan American building, where the closed sessions of the conference will be held.

The parrots will be able to overhear all the deliberations of the conference—and parrots, you know, are notoriously indiscreet about repeating what they hear.

Since delegates will have to pass the parrots to get into the conference rooms, officials are trying to train the birds to shout, "Vive la France!" "God save the king!" and whatever it is one says about the Japanese and the Chinese.

* * * *

Furnished residences are commanding a premium in the Washington real estate market thanks to the limitation of armament conference.

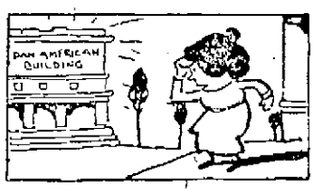

Not only are the nations represented at the conference renting spacious homes, to house their delegations, but wealthy folk from far and near, attracted by the promise of the most brilliant social season Washington ever knew, are flocking to the capital for the winter.

And real estate men—well, figure it out for yourself.

* * * *

The National Women's Party set a precedent when it established a "watch tower" opposite the capitol. Now the national council for limitation of armament has established headquarters at 17th and G streets, directly opposite the state department and only a block from the Pan American building, where the meetings of the conference will be held.

* * * *

Navy officers are peeved. It isn't so bad, they say, to hold a conference to junk the navy and throw them all out of their jobs, but it's adding insult to injury to oust the navy from its own building to make room for the conference.

"SKINNING" A PEARL

Pearls frequently become "sick" and lose their lustre, for which a treatment which had a certain vogue consisted in immersing it in the sea for a prolonged period.

But the only radical cure for the pearl's ailments is operation—the taking off of the "skin," a process which changes the appearance and improves the lustre. By the "skin" is meant the first layer of the pearl—which is made up of concentric shells, the structure resembling that of the common or garden opinion. Once the top skin is removed, another iridescent layer beneath is revealed.

I have seen this operation, technically known as "peeling," done with a knife—and in an express train at that! An expert pressed the blade down through the top layer and then flaked it off bit by bit, finally bringing up the lustre with polishing paper. In this fashion the gem was increased in value by more than 1000 per cent!

We "doctors" do not, however, "peel" valuable pearls in so risky a manner. Instead of using the knife on them, we gently rub the surface with a very fine abrasive powder, gradually wearing away all the outer skin and disclosing beauties hitherto concealed from the eyes.

The improvement effected by "peeling" is great, and always delights the owner even if she has possessed the pearl since its days of pristine beauty. Moreover its value is much enhanced.

And here is an honest hint to ladies. In many cases it would pay to have pearls "peeled" before they are sold, as the cost is more than covered by the increase in the market value. That is a tip worth knowing!

"EMBASSY" ALMOST BANKRUPT

The establishment of Admiral Mark L. Bristol, the United States high commissioner in Constantinople, which is still referred to as the "American Embassy," has just missed being closed as a result of the high cost of living and an effort by the State Department to introduce economies.

Admiral Bristol has had an extra allowance of $125 a month and $15,000 a year for the maintenance of the "embassy." The former sum had to cover the cost of the social entertainments and the latter paid for clerk hire, servants, messengers, telephones cabling, repairs and other expenses connected with a large office and residence. Sometimes Admiral Bristol has had to use his salary to meet his bills.

Recently the $15,000 was reduced by the State Department to $9,000. It seemed that the closing of the "embassy" was the only solution. Many devices were suggested for increasing the "embassy" income so it might keep open. One jocular suggestion was that a charity benefit be held.

After a good deal of correspondence with the State Department, showing that the pre-war $15,000 had lost much of its value, due to the high cost of living in Turkey, an increase was allowed and the "embassy" is still open.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

VETERANS DROP OUT OF RANKS IN PARADE AT BALTIMORE TODAY

Turn Backs on Mayor in Protest Against Alleged Insult on Part of Official

BALTIMORE, Md.—Publicly resenting what they considered an insult to them on the part of Mayor W. F. Broening, members of Baltimore Post of the Twenty ninth (Blue and Gray) division association, dropped out of the line of March as the armistice day procession neared the reviewing stand in Memorial plaza Friday. A little later they turned their backs on the mayor as he began his address to the throng assembled in the plaza and marched away.

The issue between the mayor and a group of veterans, headed by H. J. Lepper, national secretary of the Twenty-ninth division association, was chiefly over the propriety of permitting a meeting in memorial plaza this afternoon in the interest of disarmament with which the mayor had declined to interfere.

The veterans insisted the day and place should be devoted to honoring those who fought in the war and other times and places should be chosen for movement to end or mitigate war.

The executive committee of the Maryland department of the American Legion had endorsed the disarmament meeting.

SOLDIER HOME FROM FRANCE LAID TO REST

colonnade behind their boxes exchanging greetings. General Diaz of Italy joined them. Together the three moved with the Japanese to the place where the body lay.

Ambassador Geddes, in full British diplomatic uniform, brought flower offerings for the dead from England's king with a guard of British officers.

Chief of Plenty Coos, of the Crow Indians, attired in full war regalia, was seated on the platform, joining the group of distinguished military leaders from Europe. Thus the uniform of the first Americans took its place with those of its allied powers in the last war. A group of Indian braves were in the audience, tiptoeing in their beaded moccasins down the aisle to their seats.

Premier Briand of France was among the last to arrive.

The first strains of "Chopin's Funeral March" had heralded the coming of the unknown to his great honors.

Far out among the trees toward the fort, the dull dun color of moving troops had shown, and marching half step to the throbbing, muffled beat of the drums, the marine band had swung slowly out to circle the great colonnade of the entrance where the surpliced choir waited.

Song Heard in Frisco

As the casket was lifted from the gun carriage the solemn chords of a hymn were joined by the deep notes of the band. The choir sang "The Son of God Goes Forth to War" as the telephone amplifiers caught up the notes and threw them out over the land to the thousands standing as far away as San Francisco.

On its simple base, a hundred yards from where it will lie for all eternity, the casket of America's unknown rested as though supported by a mountain of blossoms of every color and kind from nations all over the world.

As former President Taft took his seat, Admiral Beatty appeared surrounded by his officers. Exactly at 11:50 o'clock President and Mrs. Harding came in and took their places.

Stand in Silence

Chaplain Axton pronounced the invocation. Then the sudden clear note of the army trumpet called "Attention." marked noon and the nation-wide two-minute pause. The whole company stood bowed in silence. (The transmission of this dispatch was interrupted for two minutes while all employes of the association stood at "Attention.")

There was absolute silence, a hush as if the world had stopped.

The opening notes of America signaled the ending of the two-minute period and the great chorus was caught up and swept over the hills, the thousands outside joining in the mighty hymn of love of country.

Weeks Speaks

As the last great note died away Secretary Weeks stepped to his place beside the bier for his brief speech as master of ceremonies. He said:

"We are gathered, not to mourn the passing of a great general or other conspicuous person, but an unknown soldier of the republic, who fought to sustain a great cause for which he gave his life. Whether he came from the north, the south, the east or the west, we do not know. Neither do we know his name, his lineage or any other fact relating to his life or death, but we do know that he was a typical American who responded to his country's call, and that he now sleeps with the heroes.

"We, who are gathered here in such numbers, are simply representative of all the people of the United States who are here in spirit and whose sentiments have been more deeply stirred by this event than any in the life of our country. These sentiments can only be adequately expressed by one citizen—the president of the United States."

Immediately afterward President Harding began delivering his address—a tribute in the name of the American people to the man who slept beneath the flag.

Sun Comes Forth

As Mr. Harding spoke, the sun drove through the haze and splashed the whole great gathering with golden light as though it also would lay its life-saving hand in commendation on the noble faithful servant at rest.

There was unbroken silence as the president spoke. Every tone of his voice showed the emotions he felt as he read slowly and distinctly that his words might be caught by the electric appliances and sent winging across the nation to gatherings listening beside the far Pacific at San Francisco and to another multitude drawn together in mourning in New York.

There was a dramatic moment as the president concluded, when touching on the coming conference in Washington, he said it should be the beginning of a better civilization, a more lasting peace, and then ended his address with the Lord's prayer, in which the thousands joined.

At the conclusion of the prayer a quartet of singers from the Metropolitan Opera house of New York, sang "The Supreme Sacrifice."

Decorate Bier

Major Fenton of the general staff then stepped forward and handed to Secretary Weeks the velvet lined boxes containing the nation's highest tokens of valor from the dead hero.

Secretary Weeks took the congressional medal of honor and the distinguished service cross, from their cases and handed them to President Harding. The president leaned over the casket and, side by side, at the head, pinned both in place.

Then Lieutenant General Baron Jacques of Belgium, stepped forward. He paused, clutching the Belgian Croix de Guerre on his own breast, tore it from the cloth of his tunic to pin it on the flag-draped casket. The Belgian chief stepped back and his hand shot to his cap brim in salute.

The Victoria cross, Britain's most prized war decoration, never before placed on the breast of a man not a British subject, was next bestowed.

Earl Beatty, admiral of the fleet, set it on the flag and saluted as he stepped back. Then the Earl of Cavan, representing the king of England, in person, spoke briefly of the services this humble soldier had rendered not only America, but the world.

Marshal Foch of France, stepped forward and with every show of feeling placed above the quiet breast the Medaille Militaire and the Croix de Guerre. He cited this dead soldier for valor, speaking in French, saluted and turned away to let General Diaz of Italy pin Italy's gold medal for bravery.

In order, the Rumanian Virtutea Militara was added to the gleaming row on the casket by Prince Bibesco, Rumanian minister; the Czecho-Slovak war cross, by M. Steienek, minister here, and the Virtuti Militari, by Prince Lubomirski, Polish minister.

Committed to Grace

At the conclusion of that part of the ceremony the quartet sang "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," and Chaplain Lazaron read a psalm. Then there was a soprano solo, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," and Chaplain Frazier read the Scripture lesson. Then, accompanied by the band and led by the quartet, the great audience lifted its voice in "Nearer My God to Thee," the death-bed hymn of the martyred McKinley. That completed the ceremonies for that part, and the coffin was next borne from the apse and out to the sarcophagus, preceded by the clergy and followed by the pall-bearers, the president and Mrs. Harding, Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge, the foreign dignitaries and cabinet officials. Meanwhile, the band played in measured tones "Our Honored Dead." The ceremony of committing the unknown hero to the stone crypt with earth from the soil of France then followed conducted by Bishop Brent, formerly senior chaplain of the American expeditionary forces in France.

President Harding joined in the singing with every show of emotion and beside him Mrs. Harding wept as she sang. Often she had to wipe away her tears.

Honored as Never Man Before

As the slow, wonderfully solemn tones of the last hymn ceased, the body-bearers had lifted the casket, freighted now with such a precious weight of the world's highest honors to the brave as no other man has ever known and tenderly lifted the honored burden through the doorway.

As the body was committed to the crypt the last moment of the solemn ceremony was at hand. At slow half step to the dirge-like music of the band the casket was carried out to the marbled stone work that surrounds the resting place. The band played "Lead Kindly Light" as the pall-bearers laid the casket on the silver railing over the crypt. General and admirals of the unknown soldier's guard stood bareheaded.

Out over the rolling slope below, thousands more also stood in reverence.

Bishop Brent stepped to the casket to read the burial service and the wreaths and flowers were brought forward.

As the casket was placed, the body-bearers gave place to the high officers headed by Major Harbord and Admiral Rodman, who lowered it tenderly into the crypt.

Mothers Bring Wreaths

The last wreaths were placed by war mothers. Mrs. R. Emmett Digney laid in place the token of American mothers whose sons died in the war; for British mothers, Mrs. Julia McCudden placed the treasured English flowers she brought all the way to lay at the bier.

Then the Indian chief, Plenty Coos in the splendour of his tribal costume, laid down his coup stick and the war bonnet from his head on the tomb.

A crashing salvo of artillery roared out. Three rolling, thundering blasts sounded while the long lines of troops stood at "Present Arms," then "Taps," the soldiers requiem sounded, to be followed by a quick roar of twenty-one guns, the national salute.

America's unknown hero was at rest forever in his majestic shrine among the quiet hills. He lies unknown, but not unhonored nor unsung.

Preparations Begin Early

It was little more than broad daylight before the tramp of marching men, the clatter of hoofs and the grind of gun carriage wheels on the great plaza before the capitol told that the last parade for the dead was forming. Up past the gray mass of the building, under trees where only a yellowed leaf here and there lingered, the khaki tide of a funeral escort for a general of the army rolled to its place.

As the troops gathered for the march to the grave, the first, far throb of the minute guns at Fort Meyer, over the river broke the morning silence. Through the hours that followed the distant, dull note of sorrow sounded in measured interval; growing closer and closer, louder and louder as the cortege wound its way to Arlington. The knell of the guns marked the way of the funeral train, step by step, and culminated in the three crashing salvos that signified the last soldier farewell.

Booming Guns Sound Knell

From 8:30 a. m., until past noon, the distant booming wrote the story of the minutes with but one halt, as the nation stood silent for two minutes just after midday in honor of the dead.

Up in the rotunda of the capitol resting on the catafalque where Lincoln, Garfield, Grant and McKinley laid the casket had stood amid heaping piles of flowers with its silent guard of honor, a soldier, a national guardsmen, a sailor and a marine, through the night at the four corners of the bier. Then there began to gather a little group of fellow soldiers, each wearing a hero's decorations, to bear the casket to the waiting gun carriage. They were led by Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, first mentioned in Pershing's list of war heroes, and with him were Sergeants Harry Taylor of the cavalry, Thomas D. Saunders of the engineers, Louis Razga of the Coast Artillery, James W. Dell of the Field Guns, and for the navy, Chief Torpedo man, James Delaney, and Chief Water Tender, Charles Lee O'Connor and Sergeant Ernest A. Janson of the marines.

Generals Escort Casket

In the great rotunda the honorary pall bearers also gathered to walk beside the gun carriage up Pennsylvania avenue. At their head was Major General Harbord, executive assistant to General Pershing as chief of staff; himself a former enlisted man than and glad to walk beside his honored comrade rather than ride at the head of the pageant. With him were other major generals whose names bring memories of the war. There were Morton, Edwards of New England's 26th Division; there was Shanks, who ruled at Hoboken while the army was going "over there," there was Menoher who led the 42nd to victory and Bailey O'Ryan of New York's 27th and Rickards of Pennsylvania. For the navy, walked Hugh Rodman, rear admiral and commander of the battle fleet that went over; Henry B. Wilson former chief of the Atlantic fleet, and Plunkett. For the marines, was Major General Neville.

Originally General Pershing, while he was still abroad, was named as grand marshal of the military ceremonies. He was to have ridden at the head of the funeral escort but this did not suit the former commander of the American Expeditionary Forces and he, too, walked behind the casket, going afoot all the way from the capitol to Arlington cemetery and becoming chief mourner after President Harding and his party turned aside at the white house.

Harding and Pershing Walk

At the head of the parade rode Major General Bandholtz, commander of the district of Washington and grand marshal in Pershing's place. Behind President Harding and General Pershing, who were flanked by their aides came Vice President Coolidge and Admiral Coontz, chief of naval operations; then chief justice Taft, walking in his place as former president of the United States, and paired with Admiral Jones, commander of the Atlantic fleet.

There came also Lieutenant-Generals Nelson A. Miles, S. B. M. Young, both former heads of the army, both veterans of the Civil war and long retired, but out again in uniform. There was Major General Tasker H. Bliss, America's representative on the Supreme Military Council in the days when the German host drove down toward Paris in its last great effort; there was Major General Bullard, who led Pershing's First Army to victory, and there was Major General John A. Legeunne, commandant of the Marine Corps who shares with Harbord the honor of having commanded the famous 2nd Division in action in France.

When the moment came, the body bearers stepped forward, tenderly raised the casket and as they moved out and down the capitol steps, the officer pall bearers fell in, two by two, behind and the band began a solemn dirge. Outside the escort stood in motionless ranks, rifles at present, sabers flashing to the salute.

Flag draped and with a few flowers scattered over it, the casket was lifted to the black draped gun carriage with the six gleaming horses and its artillery drivers rigid in the saddles. A motion from Major General Bandholtz, commanding the escort, and a swing in the khaki column, and the road to Arlington lay ahead. The commander and his staff rode first, then the army band swung out, playing in quick time for it was a long way to go. Then came the composite regiment of foot troops, the regulars, the sailors and marines and the national guard, then the artillery and the cavalry and then the casket, riding high on its gun carriage in its last journey.

Officials in Line

Behind the president and the high officials and officers, the supreme court members walked abreast, then the cabinet, five abreast, then the governors of nearby states, then Senator Cummins and behind him the senate in column eight abreast, and in similar column the members of the house headed by Speaker Gillett and Representatives Mondell and Garrett, majority and minority leaders.

A roll of muffled drums marked the next division in which were first the Medal of Honor men. Then came comrades of the American Legion, rank on rank, then bowed veterans of other wars and a host of others marching to pay their honors to the dead.

Out into the wide avenue the column moved and on over the road where the tramping hosts of Grant's victorious legions marked out a course long ago; where presidents have ridden their way into history or back into private life; where Pershing's crusaders of the First Division, led by their chief, wound up their great adventure a few short months before. Memories of great days of the past were awakened as the pageant swung along. Who knows but that the unknown dead in France were there too?

President Leaves Column

Past the Treasury and on the line swung ahead, to halt only when the casket had passed the white house. There President Harding and the cabinet and the members of the supreme court and senate and house turned aside to go later by automobile to the Amphitheater at Arlington. The stop was brief as they left the lines, then the cortege moved on up the avenue, on through old Georgetown, where Washington once had his office as a surveyor and mapped out great undertakings, on to the old bridge that spans the Potomac and opens the way to the Military Road leading up to the post of Fort Meyer and Arlington National cemetery on the high ridge above.

At the bridge the band turned aside and some of the older officers of the escort fell out, leaving it to the hardy men of today's army to escort their dead comrade up the long hill to the roll only of muffled drums.

At the top, the line swung on across the old parade toward the Arlington gate. There the artillery and cavalry turned aside to stand at attention while the services in the cemetery were in progress. One battery of guns alone moved into the enclosure of the dead, lining up on the ridge crest for the last salute.

At the gate the marine band was waiting for the foot troops and the casket and marched in ahead. The march was slackened; the half step and the wail of a funeral dirge sounded as it moved in narrowed formation through the trees and clustering tombs and monuments and out over the open spaces about the amphitheater where thousands were gathered.

Swinging around to the west entrance to the amphitheater, the escort moved into line and with rifles at present, stood as the casket was carried by the body bearers in through the high pillard colonade to the right and around to the apse at the front where President Harding and members of the cabinet, Bishop Brent and many dignitaries awaited it.

The platform had been raised high and the front was a mass of flowers as the casket bearers, followed by the officers as honorary pall bearers, moved slowly around the colonnade. On a special stand, well to the front, the narrow box was placed and Secretary Weeks stepped forward as master of ceremonies, briefly to introduce President Harding after the prayer.

Stand in Silence

As Bishop Brent concluded the invocation which opened the ceremony, the bells in Washington, across the river were ringing the noon hour. The whole company in the amphitheater rose and stood in silence for two minutes as the whole nation stood, by Presidential proclamation, in reverence for the dead.

Then came the singing of "America," rising in a mighty chorus. After that President Harding moved forward to stand beside the casket and speak for the nation. Far below him, out of sight under the strong work, men toiled with nerves strained to the breaking point that no word be said might be lost by the thousands gathered in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco about the lectric sound transmitting devices. From the top of the ampitheater also the amplifiers caught up his words and threw them out to the multitude.

Honors Placed on Casket

After his address President Harding pinned on the top of the casket the two most valued decorations in America—the Medal of Honor, bestowed by acts of congress, and the Distinguished Service Cross, given by order of the Commander in Chief who pinned it in place. From their places in the marble boxes about the amphitheater, the great foreign leaders rose to pay similar honors, Marshal Foch, General Diaz, General Jacquez, Admiral Beatty so that the roll of highest honors to the brave might be complete.

There was more music then, music filled with the solemn uplift from which religious men and women have drawn comfort in all the years, and singers whose voices have made them known over the world came to add their share to the tribute. Then came the solemn words of the Twenty Third Psalm and the scripture lesson; then the body bearers stepped forward to lift the casket again and carry it out to the sarcophagus on the ampitheater terrace with a vista of river and hill and stately city stretching away below.

Buried in Soil of France

A last touch of the spirit of France awaited the dead here. Over the floor of the narrow crypt in which he will sleep forever, soil from France had been spread; earth from the country where his death blood was poured out on a stricken field that it might remain free soil. It was brought with the casket from France and forever the nameless one of America, who died for France and for America will rest on French soil here in his own home earth.

A prayer and the burial service marked the last rites as the casket was placed, then the triple salvo of guns burst out and before the echoes of the last blast died, the thin pure call of the bugle sounded "taps," the soldiers requiem and good night. As the last long tone died away, again the guns sounded, this time in the quick, throbbing pound of the National Salute of twenty-one guns; officers of all services standing at salute and troops at present as the cannon roared their last tribute.

The president and his party moved away to their motor cars, the band struck up a lively quick step and stepped off across the hill and down toward a distant gate with the troops behind it; the crowds slowly broke up and drifted away.

America's unknown soldier from France was home forever; home to sleep.

WORLD'S HEAVIEST WOMAN DIES TODAY AT GALENA

GALENA, Mo. — Mrs. Samantha Minton, who weighed more than six hundred pounds and was believed to be one of the heaviest women in the world, died Friday after a year's illness. Her body was eight feet in circumference. Mrs. Minton was 37 years old and is survived by a husband.

can friendship by associating herself with American purpose. Having no war fleet she will welcome any decision which tends to reduce the sea power of the other great nations. Not regarding her Pacific possession as vital, she will have no such embarrassments as the British, who are bound to think in a measure as an Asiatic power.

One possible line of French policy must awaken apprehension. Briand comes to Washington fresh from a battle in the Chamber which has been far less decisive than he hoped for. It would be of infinite advantage to him if he could carry back with him the credit of having played a brilliant, a profitable role in Washington. The obvious role, urged by some Paris journals, is that of the "Honest Broker", bringing into harmony conflicting American and Japanese interests. Always assuming that Briand could successfully play such a role, his political fortunes at home would be enhanced.

May Want to Intervene

But it is clear that attempting to play such a role would be running the risk not alone of offending Japan but also the United States, for it would inevitably be the duty of the arbitrator to demand concessions on both sides. This danger has been foreseen in many quarters in Paris and warnings have been issued. Yet one is bound to accept the comments of many French journals which agree that Briand is totally ignorant of American facts and under very great temptation to endeavor to restore his shaky domestic situation by a shining foreign achievement.

On the whole it seems likely that Briand will avoid this danger. He comes armed to defend French army establishment, he comes prepared to justify the policy which France adheres to in the matter of a standing army. But he does not come to demand an alliance, he does not come with any hope that such an alliance can be brought about and he will go into the question only if his hands are forced by any American or Anglo-American insistence upon reduction of land forces.

The maximum of French expectation is an improvement in Franco-American relations, some little lessening of the American criticism of French policy in Europe and toward Germany procured by a whole hearted championship of American policy in the conference. Apart from any question of the personal political fortunes of M. Briand, France has no real reason for seeking to play a conspicuous part.

All for U. S.

If there shou'd be any real divergence of opinion between the British and American representatives, I am bound to say I do not thing the French would either shed tears or waste time in committing themselves to the American side of the controversy. Anglo-French relations are far from cordial. All over the world French and British policies are in conflict and the French hostility to Lloyd George is very intense.

But not even a Frenchman can believe that Lloyd George would be stupid enough to give Briand an opening of this sort. France is disillusioned and disappointed at the outcome of the war settlements. She blames the British, not the Americans, in part I think with more regard for convenience than for exact accuracy of appraisal. But she no longer thinks that it is possible to regain the advantages which she bartered away at Paris for the now valueless triple alliance.

No Favors Expected from Us

We shall have the French proxy in our own hands in the Washington conference on all questions dividing us from the Japanese. We should have it if there were any division between American and British policies. There is not even a remote possibility that France will undertake to bargain its vote against some American favor. The only conceivable divergence between American and French views would come if we endeavored to impose our own program in the matter of French military strength—and that issue will not be raised.

After all the Washington conference is for France something of a joyride. No vital interest of France is involved and there may well be an opportunity for the French to do a graceful favor for the United States. Ever since the Paris conference and during it, France has been daily asked to concede something she regarded as her due in order to satisfy her allies. Now it is Japan's turn and since Japan has invariably voted against France in the supreme council, French sympathy will be restrained. If there is any exception to the general readiness of French representatives to accept American views it is only in one direction. The French cannot understand our feeling on the race phase of the Japanese question and while they certainly will not concern themselves in the least with it, one can perceive that they see something illiberal and unjust in our stand on this issue.

France Expects Success

In questions affecting the Pacific, France will vote with us against Japan without hesitation, if any difference of opinion arises between us and Britain on naval matters, the French will support us with positive enthusiasm. It is the view of the French that the Japanese are prepared to make great concessions and that, accordingly much may be accomplished in the way of agreements. They forecast a successful conference and have sent two of their greatest orators to help make it so.

PLANT MEMORIAL TREES AT WISCONSIN-ILLINOIS LINE

ZION, Ill.—Four trees were Friday planted by the Milwaukee-Chicago highway association as a part of the Armistice day celebrations, two of the trees being on each side of the Wisconsin-Illinois state line.

The Zion band attended the ceremonies and ex-Governor Deneen and Judge Fairchild of Milwaukee delivered memorial addresses.

NO KRAUT SHORTAGE IN MILWAUKEE SAYS DELICATESSEN MAN

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Milwaukee will not be affected by the nation-wide sauerkraut famine predicted by the National Sauerkraut Packers' association now meeting in Chicago. The packers say that the crops in Michigan and other important cabbage-growing centers has been almost destroyed by a fungus disease known as the "yellows."

"Farmers in the districts surrounding Milwaukee are overloaded with fine large heads of cabbage," said Adolph Deenehl, head of Milwaukee's largest wholesale delicatessen house. "We have all the sauerkraut we want and are able to make all the kraut that is needed. And the price is very moderate, too."

In addition to being the poor man's dinner, kraut, it is said, is used as the rich man's medicine.

STRIKE OF GOTHAM GARMENT WORKERS EXPECTED MONDAY

NEW YORK.—A strike of $50,000 garment workers in the Metropolitan area next Monday appeared inevitable Friday as the result of the cloak, suit and skirt manufacturers' protective association's determination to operate on a piece-work basis beginning on that day and to increase the working week from 41 to 49 hours.

The members of the cloak, skirt and reefer makers' union affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers union, decided to strike as a protest against the manufacturers' new plan.

of representation in the imperial parliament, which she regards as her strongest safeguard; and also that it would give the Sinn Fein a majority on the proposed central council of all Ireland.

Protest Sinn Fein Majority

Another objection, it is understood, was that the central council, composed in the majority of Sinn Feiners, would so adjust taxation as to favor the agricultural south to the detriment of the manufacturing north.

Sinn Fein circles commenting on the points raised by the Ulstermen declared the Sinn Fein could not consent either to representation from Ireland in the imperial parliament or to any constitutional provision for an all Ireland parliament which would give Ulster a privileged position, making one Ulsterman, it was remarked, equal to four southerners.

"OVER THE HILL" TO STAY HERE SUNDAY OWING TO WEATHER

Many Unable to Come Because of Snow and Bad Roads Will Have Chance on Sunday

"Over the Hill," the notable motion picture which is now at the La Crosse theater, will remain an extra day, it was announced on Friday by the management, making public the fact that the picture will be shown Sunday matinee and night performances.

The extra day's stay of the picture was laid to the weather, which has greatly interfered with the plans of out-of-town visitors who had planned to see the film, because of its effect upon the roads. Similarly the weather has kept many La Crosse people indoors, it was said, who were anxious to see the picture, as well as interfering with street car service and otherwise preventing attendance.

In order to give everyone a chance to see the picture, therefore, the three extra performances of Sunday were added to the scheduled week's run.

Free elevator services, milling and transportation for the corn has been arranged and it will be sent immediately to the famine regions of Armenia, the Des Moines executive said.

FAILURE OF ARMS CONFERENCE WOULD BE DISASTER--GREY

Former British Foreign Minister Discusses Parley in Newspaper Article

NATIONS MUST ALTER VIEWPOINT TO ASSURE SUCCESS HE SAYS

Questions Whether Diplomacy Caused Trouble as Claimed

LONDON, (By the Associated Press.)—Failure by the Washington armament conference to attain the ends for which it was summoned, would be a great disaster, Viscount Grey declares in an article contributed to the Westminster Gazette.

Recalling that it has been said the delegates to the conference should leave the old diplomacy behind them in Europe, the former foreign minister asks whether the old diplomacy was the cause of troubles, or whether it was rather the result of troubles. The secret treaties which were often declared to be the evil of the old diplomacy were not, he maintained, necessary to any part of that system.

"Want of candor, professing to desire one object while really pursuing another, professing to be inspired by an altruistic motive while prompted by a selfish one, hypertrophy of the sense of separate interest and atrophy of the sense of common interest—all these, though not universal, were often dominant in the old diplomacy, and wrecked or paralyzed conferences and concert of powers," he said.

"What is needed at Washington," he declared, "is not a change of method but a change in the point of view. If the latter be there, the old methods will disappear, but not otherwise."

Viscount Grey declares his absolute belief that those who summoned the conference were animated by the high aspirations of a patriotism larger than national patriotism, and that the conference had an entirely honorable and pure origin.

"When they come to close quarters," he asks, however, "will the government of the United States and the other governments be able to keep on this high plane?"

CHICAGO POLICEMAN ROBBED OF HIS STAR

CHICAGO, Ill.—Five bandits early Friday held up a saloon next door to a police station where there were fifty policemen, took $10,000 in diamonds and cash from the occupants of the saloon, and a revolver and star from William Byrnes, a uniformed policeman.

The principal loot taken was a 5½ karat diamond known as the "Kohinoor of Maxwell street," and valued at $5,000 by its owner, Frank Goldberg, who is also the proprietor of the saloon.

"I'll probably need this later on," remarked one of the bandits as he unpinned the star from the policeman's coat.

UNCLE SAM—SHE'S OUR BEST FRIEND; LET'S BACK HER UP

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD RUSSIAN WAR VETERAN DECORATED BY FOUR DIFFERENT COUNTRIES IS STUDENT AT UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA

LINCOLN, Neb.—An officer in the Russian army at the age of ten, decorated for valor by four different nations and with a service bar that denotes action in practically every country in Europe and Egypt, Miroslav Marek, declared to be the youngest foreign veteran of the world war, has reached America and enrolled in the arts and science college of the university of Nebraska. Marek, an orphan, is seventeen now, but he held the rank of lieutenant in the Czar's guard.

Marek reached America largely through his own resources, after having failed in the attempt on two previous occasions. He tried to land at San Francisco from a transport, which he accompanied out of Vladivostok when refugees were fleeing before the bolsheviki in 1918, but was unsuccessful. Another troop ship on which he started to America was wrecked off the coast of Japan. He finally entered the United States from the Atlantic.

Throughout his experiences, Marek has preserved the records of his deeds and displays the citations, which brought him his decorations. His war record is a piece-meal on all varieties of paper and rags, which he has patched and worked together that the record might be readable.

Marek was decorated at Moscow in 1915 by Czar Nicholas, with the Royal Cross of St. George. In 1916, the Polish Legion was conferred upon him for exceptional intelligence service, and in 1918, General Hanin of the French army, decorated him with the Medalle Militaire for similar service. President Masarek, of Czecho-Slovakia, conferred the cross of honor on him at Prague in 1920. Marek shows wound scars and lacerations, the latter, he says, having been inflicted upon him by the bolsheviki because he refused to divulge secrets.

The youthful warrior speaks broken English, but his story, which professors have helped him to unfold, started at the beginning of the world war, when his father was a captain in the Russian army. By nativity Marek is a Slav, but he was reared in exile because his father fled from Brunn, Moravia, after having been implicated in a political uprising against the Hapsburgs.

PRESIDENT ISSUES PROCLAMATION ON RED CROSS DRIVE

Calls Attention of American People to Great Work Done by Organization

RELIEF IN CENTRAL EUROPE ATTAINS WIDE PROPORTIONS

Fulfills Every Requirement of its Congressional Charter

WASHINGTON, D. C. The following statement by President Harding, urging universal support of the annual roll call of the American Red Cross which begins generally throughout the country November 11, continuing through Thanksgiving day, November 24, was issued from the White house last night:

"To the American People: As president of the United States of America and president of the American Red Cross, I announce that the Red Cross annual roll call will begin on Armistice day, November 11, and continue through Thanksgiving day, November 24, and I designate November 13 as Red Cross Sunday.

"I recommend ministers and priests of all congregations to stress the gospel of service on November 13, and I invite and urge my fellow citizens to accept the entire period of the roll call as an occasion for rededication of themselves to the principles and practice of service. The American Red Cross is both the volunteer and semi-official medium through which our people may appropriately express their patriotic and humane desires to render practical assistance to their soldiers and sailors, to their fellow citizens in civilian life, and to those peoples of other lands who have a human claim on the sympathetic concern of our own people.

Has Kept Faith

"The American Red Cross has kept faith with the principles which gave it birth and with the obligations laid upon it by congressional charter to act in matters of voluntary relief and in accord with the military and naval authorities as a medium of communication between the people of the United States and their army and navy; after a notable war service, it, in conjunction with the veterans' bureau and other activities, stands by our veterans and their families in a period of painful reconstruction, in which, as too many of us have been prone to forget, thousands are in pressing need, not only of governmental attention and assistance, but also of those supplementary acts of human kindness which only volunteer mercy can supply.

"By systematic and scientific plans and equipment for relief from disaster, and by prompt response to many urgent calls throughout the past year, the American Red Cross has fulfilled another requirement of its congressional charter 'to continue and carry on a system of national and international relief in time of peace and to apply the same in mitigating the sufferings caused by pestilence, famine, fire, floods and other great national calamities.'

Relief in Europe

"After liquidating its obligations of general relief to peoples of other lands who were associated with us in the great war, it has concentrated its foreign efforts on a program for the medical relief of children in Central Europe, and, from funds made available last year, it continues this work of mercy, and also contributes from its medical and hospital supplies for the work of relief in Russia which is operated under American direction.

"As a result of vast and varied experience during the world war, the American Red Cross has devised and put in operation an extensive domestic health and welfare program whereby our American communities are instructed and directed in the solution of those community problems upon which the public will ultimately rests.

"It is a fundamental principle of the Red Cross not to duplicate but to supplement the efforts of governmental and other agencies in the mitigation and alleviation of human suffering, and to supply the means thereto where other agencies do not exist. The call of the American Red Cross is the call of the country and humanity, and I earnestly urge my fellow citizens to make that response which satisfies the promptings of a generous people.

ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM GIVEN AT HIGH SCHOOL

Interesting Event Marks Observance of Big Day in Local Institution

Thursday night at the La Crosse high school auditorium a very interesting Armistice program was given, which was open to the general public as well as the students. A fairly large crowd was in attendance.

A feature of the evening was the tableau of the disarmament conference which was put on by Miss Desmond's English VIII classes. Musical numbers by the High School glee clubs under the direction of Miss Stella Trane, and a short talk by William C. Strehl, commander of the Roy L. Vingers Post of the American Legion concluded the order of exercises.

The disarmament conference was imitated as carefully as was possible, and was put on in a very creditable manner. Pavlina Leinfelder as Charles Evans Higbee, the chairman of the conference, gave a convincing discussion of the meeting. Other speakers who represented different nations and their viewpoints were: Oswald Sagen, David Tubias, Hall Jorris, Chester Hammersburg, George Muenzenberger, Roland Mahlo, Donald Niebuhr, Sam Lewis and Fred Hankerson.

The combined glee clubs under the direction of Miss Trane, sang the national songs of Great Britain and the United States, in addition to Kipling's "Recessional" and "Lest We Forget."

The address of William C. Strehl, though short, was very interesting and was well received.

NORMAL STUDENTS PASS RESOLUTIONS FOR WORLD PEACE

Measure to be Sent President Harding and Other Disarmament Conferees

Wednesday morning the student body of the Normal school turned chapel into a committee of the whole to consider disarmament. Mr. M. A. Goff, chairman, called the meeting expressing his ideas on the coming conference. A call for volunteer speeches was responded to by faculty members and students who discussed the following subjects:

Reasons Why Conference May Fail.
America's Stand and Her Difficulties.
England's, France's and Japan's Standpoints.
The Cost of Past Wars.
The Power of Public Opinion.

A motion was passed that a committee of five, two faculty members and three students, be appointed to formulate a resolution to be send to President Harding, Secretary of State Hughes and our commissioners to the conference. The committee appointed were Miss Trowbridge and Mr. Goff, faculty, and Miss Doris Frederickson, Mr. Palmer Henderson and Mr. Larry Engelhard, student members.

On Thursday morning the committee reported the following resolution which was unanimously approved of by the students.

Resolution Adopted

"Whereas, we, the faculty and student body of the State Normal school at La Crosse, Wisconsin, fear that the continuation of the world's present state of military extravagance, which is so seriously curtailing expenditures for necessary civic purposes, will in the future result in an engulfing and crushing disaster; and

"Whereas, we believe that armaments do not afford adequate security, but actually create insecurity; for the competition in armaments produces an atmosphere of suspicion, distrust and rival scheming, which is the most subtle foe to peace and safety; and

"Whereas, we believe that the people facing the appalling sacrifices of war, are ready to attempt a co-operative plan for removing all sources of misunderstanding; and

"Whereas, we fear that the principal objective of the conference may be defeated if the chief delegates permit their critics and opponents to subtly befog the main issue—limitation of armament; therefore,

"Resolved, that we express to President Harding and the American commissioners to the conference on the limitation of armaments our confidence and unqualified support in their attempt to reduce world armament and promote universal peace; further

"Resolved, that we, believing our government is relying upon the moral support of her people, desire that it give to them full and immediate reports of the proceedings of the conference."

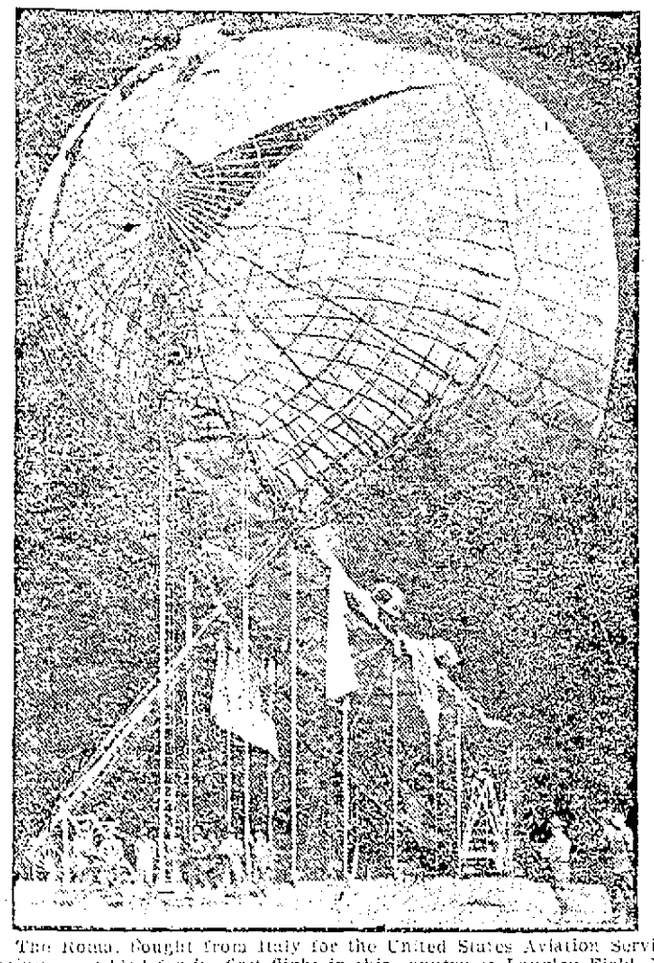

Service is Held

The committee of the whole rose and held an Armistice day memorial service. Rev. J. C. Dixon was the principal speaker. He spoke on the subject of disarmament. Mr. Dixon gave an interesting description of the heralding of the signing of the armistice here three years ago. He compared the pessimistic outlook of the conference to that of slavery some twenty years ago. Women of the world are taking an interest in peace insofar that even the women of old China are sending an 80-year-old woman to represent them. The old idea of large armaments as a preventative of war is now vanishing and people of all countries are beginning to realize that limitation of armaments is the only prerequisite to international peace. The speaker further stated that American ideals are being looked up to and that all matters must be settled on the table rather than on the field.

A short program was then given as follows:

Star Spangled Banner—All students.
Reading, "In Flanders Field"—President F. A. Cotton.
Kipling's Recessional, Male quartet—Mr. Every, C. Russell, Christianson and R. Hurd.
Song, "The Boys of the Old Brigade"—Male quartet.

BURNING SUBMARINE IN THRILLING RUN TO PACIFIC BASE

Catches Fire Under Water and Seven of Crew are Burned or Overcome by Smoke

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—The 15-mile run for life off Los Angeles harbor of the blazing submarine L-6 on Thursday was followed by inquiry into the cause of the fire which suddenly burst forth in the forward compartment of the craft while it was ten fathoms beneath the surface.

Seven men, including the commander, Lieutenant M. V. Stonestreet, were either overcome by smoke and gas or seriously burned.

The submarine was on the way from San Diego to Los Angeles on the last leg of a 68-hour full power and endurance run and had been out forty-eight hours when fumes broke out in the forward compartment batteries.

The fumes were so great that several men were overcome before the compartment door was locked. Then the craft was raised to the surface and the crew ordered to the narrow deck. With smoke and fumes pouring from the open hatches, the vessel dashed for the submarine base at Los Angeles harbor, fifteen miles away.

WHEN BIRDS FLY SOUTH

Have you ever arisen before the birds awakened you, when the dawn sky was still flecked with clouds that drifted, it may be, across the face of a dying moon, and heard in the hush, far, far above you, the speech of unseen voyagers going south? It is a strange, a memorable sensation, to look into the blank of sky while your ears tell you that the aerial migration is winging past. Perhaps, with a glass, you can pick out the specks against a rosy cloud of the moon disk. Birds, it may be no larger than a humming bird, hundreds of them, thousands of them, all the spring, threading their way for endless miles by the gleam of a river far below, the dark patch of a mountain forest, the haze and glow of a town—straight sometimes to last year's nest.

When their little voices drop from the mist or the darkness, hearing a message of their passing, it is a poor soul indeed which does not thrill in answer, and in answer to the sweet twitter of some flock of tiny warblers no less than the heroic clang of the Canada geese, flying in battle forma-tion with a sound like the dragging of a chain over some vast corrugation of the air.—Walter Prichard Eaton, in Harper's.

The Humble Clothespin

Every Monday morning thousands of pulley lines squeak and thousands of clothes pins are jabbed into place. In spite of many new inventions, people the world over still use the primitive wooden clothespin, designed years ago by a New Hampshire man. Twenty-million feet of lumber are said to be needed each year to supply the clothespin manufacturers in the United States.

Odds and Ends of State Affairs by William J. Anderson

MADISON, Wis.—We do not hear as much these days as was heard 25 years ago in dispraise of paternal government. There is a reason for this. State government, to say nothing of the tendencies of the Federal government, is growing more paternalistic every year, and to oppose paternalism would mean opposition to most of the governmental functions we all recognize as necessary. There is no doubt that when a state authority forbids the pollution of any given stream, it is acting in a paternalistic way. The people generally have come to see that as society becomes more complex the state must assume more authority. I am reminded of this tendency of state government by the functioning of the state board of health, referred to further along. The truth is that if society is to progress along normal lines the state must more and more undertake new functions.

These new functions are undertaken solely because experience proves them to be necessary for the public welfare, are really what are meant by those who declaim against the creation of boards and commissions. Laws are not self-enforcing, and if a measure deeply important to the public is enacted the chances are a board or commission specially empowered to enforce it will be needed. How would all our fine pure food laws be enforced if it were not for a dairy and food commission? What state would we be in if there were not an active efficient body in existence to enforce our public health laws?

All of this harks back again to the question of increasing taxes. Neither local nor state law-enforcing bodies can operate without expense; and as the state assumes new functions the cost of government will increase. If people generally could give the same consideration to the question of government cost as they do to ordinary living costs, there would be less complaint about taxes.

* * * *

The anti-saloon league opened its state-wide campaign in Madison for law enforcement, with a series of afternoon meetings, and a big mass meeting in the university gymnasium in the evening. The medical beer order issued from Washington has stirred much feeling, that will add intensity to the campaign. The league considers that this order is a virtual annulment of the eighteenth amendment and of the Volstead law and will fight to the limit.

* * * *

Here are four items concerning the functioning of the state board of health that will suggest how necessary a measure of government paternalism is: Following her refusal to pursue treatments, a venerally afflicted Manitowoc woman, after investigation by a deputy state health officer and upon order of the state board of health, was committed by a local judge to a state institution for treatment.

* * * *

Upon request of Minnesota authorities, a college student, who was infected with a venereal disease in February, 1921, was apprehended in in this state by state health officials and promised to continue treatment until cured.

* * * *

The jurisdiction of a county nurse in attending cases of communicable disease in rural school pupils enrolled in a neighboring city came before the state board of health for a ruling. It was held that such cases in city schools are properly supervised by the nurses employed by the city. Upon a request of the health officer of the township outside, however, a county nurse should take throat swabs of pupils attending city schools and otherwise assist the local health officer. A city board of health may refuse to receive rural pupils until they come with a clean bill of health furnished by the health board of the town where they live.

* * * *

Winnebago county has been instructed by the board to replace old and unsanitary plumbing in the county jail and jailer's quarters by fixtures of sanitary design. The old fixtures had previously been condemned by the state board of control.

* * * *

An interesting question has arisen concerning money for the operation of the Teachers' Retirement Fund. The legislature of 1921 in passing the law to reorganize the teachers' pension fund and place it on a sound actuarial basis appropriated $12,000 per year for the expenses of the office. This sum it appears is very much below what is needed, and the board in charge of the fund applied for an emergency appropriation to the governor, the secretary of state and the state treasurer, the law requiring these three officials to pass upon each emergency application. The governor and the secretary of state are willing to approve the application, but the state treasurer is not, he claiming that the board should get along with what the legislature appropriated for operating expenses. Now the question arises whether two out of the three officials, that is whether the approval of application for an emergency appropriation by the governor and the secretary of state is sufficient without Mr. Johnson's signature.

It is rather unfortunate in view of the severe criticism made of emergency appropriations by the governor in his special message to the legislature last winter, that it should be found necessary so soon after the adjournment of the legislature to apply for such an appropriation. In a communication to the governor, State Treasurer Johnson suggests the need of a ruling by the attorney general or by the court as to the constitutionality of the new law. He also objects to the proposed expenditures of the board as contemplated in the large emergency appropriation asked for. The differences between the three officials named, on the justice of the emergency demand are likely to give the teachers fund some unpleasant notoriety.

The common bean is a native of South America, and was introduced into Europe during the sixteenth century. Now it is represented by over 150 varieties.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or troubles you

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to neutralize the acid.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then, thereby avoiding serious complications.

RED CROSS RELIEF EXTENDED UPON 43 OCCASIONS IN YEAR

Disasters Ranged from Grasshopper Plague in Dakota to Chinese Famine

SOCIETY SPENT NEARLY TWO MILLIONS IN RELIEF WORK

Pueblo Flood Most Serious Disaster During Year

WASHINGTON.—Forty-three disasters ranging from the grasshopper plague in North Dakota to the Chinese famine called for emergency relief measures by the American Red Cross, during the fiscal year, ending June 30, according to the portion of the society's annual report dealing with peace-time service, made public today.

The disasters resulted in the death in the United States of 850 persons and the injury of 2,500, caused property damage estimated at $30,000,000, affected 67 communities and rendered 65,000 families homeless. Attendant relief activities resulted in an expenditure by the Red Cross of $1,871,000.

The summary of the year's disasters as given in the report showed that Red Cross relief was furnished in the case of seventeen fires, five floods, seven tornadoes or cyclones, one devastating storm, three explosions, including the one in Wall Street, one building accident, two typhoid epidemics, the more serious being that at Salem, Ohio, which affected nine per cent of the population; a small pox epidemic in Haiti, a train wreck, the Tulsa, Okla., race riot; the famine in China, affecting millions of persons; the famine among the Indians of Alaska, the grasshopper plague in North Dakota and an earthquake in Italy.

The most serious disaster in the United States was the Pueblo flood last June, in which the Red Cross assisted in rehabilitation.

In marked contrast with the previous year, only one tornado assumed the proportions of a major disaster, the report said. This occurred last April in the border sections of Texas and Arkansas with the city of Texarkana as the center. The famine in China, calling for expenditure by the Red Cross of more than $1,000,000 was the most serious of foreign disasters in which the organization gave aid.

The report declared an increasing effectiveness on the part of the Red Cross to deal with emergencies was manifest during the year. Through its chain of chapters, linking virtually every county in the country with national headquarters at Washington, the Red Cross, it was said, has established a network of communication through which instantaneous relief may be dispatched to any part of the United States.

Through its nursing service, its home hygiene and care of the sick, nutrition, first aid and life saving classes and health centers, and in numerous other ways designed to acquaint masses of citizens with proper methods of living, the Red Cross carried its message of health into all parts of the country. The American Red Cross nursing service, the reserve of the army, navy and public health service, at the end of the year had enrolled 37,787 nurses, an increase of 1,084 over last year. More than 73,000 certificates were issued to women and girls who completed the Red Cross course in home hygiene and care of the sick and through its 260 health centers, the Red Cross reached 90,252 persons with health information.

AN AIR SHARK

It was reported recently that in the eyrie of a peregrine, a very vicious bird, in Lakeland, the rings of twenty-two racing pigeons were found. The peregrine falcon often kills birds which are unfortunate enough to cross its path. Peewits and other birds that frequent the coast are relentlessly pursued by this hawk, and another prey is the golden plover, but this birds affords the hawk a good chase before it is caught.

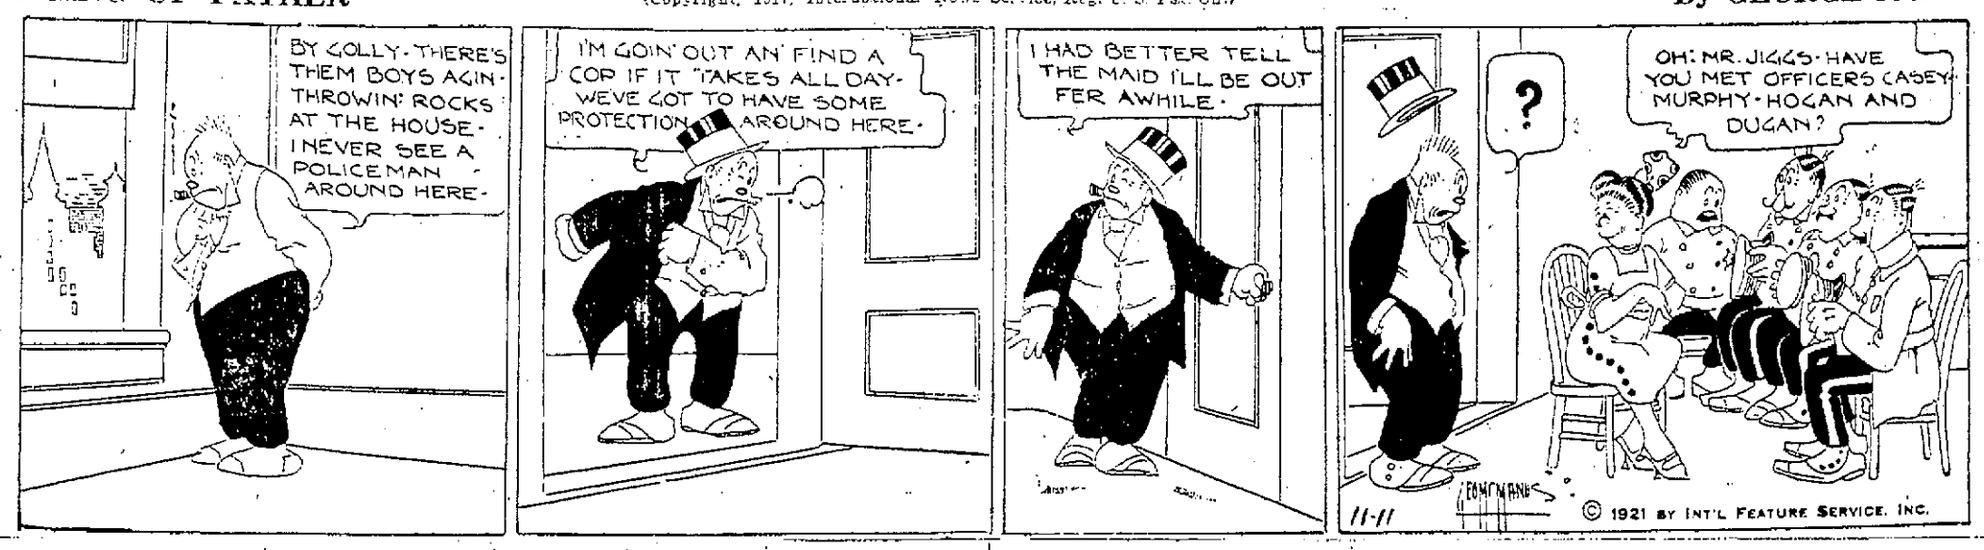

The peregrine catches its prey by protruding its strong legs and talons to their fullest extent when within a few feet of the quarry. Then for a moment its wings are almost closed, and the next the prize is seized and carried off. If however, the object is too heavy to be lifted from the ground it is forced along sometimes a hundred yards on the ground, and killed and devoured on the spot. The nest of the peregrine is usually placed on the face of some precipitous cliff, resting on a shelf of rock or tuft of vegetation, and consists of a mass of sticks and course stems of grass and ferns.

Venus of Milo Unearthed

One hundred years ago the French government came into possession of the Venus of Milo for the small sum of 15 hundred francs. A young midshipman, named Voutier, was exploring the island of Milo when he noticed a peasant working with a pickax at some object in the ground. He found that it was a statue in three pieces, and was astonished at its unusual beauty. A Greek monk prevented him from buying the statue at once, but Voutier appealed to the French ambassador at Constantinople, who went direct to the Sultan and induced him to sell for a trifle what is now considered the foremost piece of art in the world.

> "According to French official reports, artificial butter goes much further as food than the genuine article, and forms a perfectly wholesome dietetic material. There can be no doubt that a pure, sweet fat, such as is manufactured by the process of M. Mege-Mouries, is a safer and more wholesome article than the unsavory rancid butter which is sold so freely among the poorer classes."

CHRIST REAR HELD FOR CIRCUIT COURT ON ROBBERY CHARGE

Cook in P. J. Kelly's Saloon Doesn't Plead When Arraigned in County Court

Christ Rear, cook for P. J. Kelly's saloon, on Mill street, was held under $2,000 bail for circuit court, on charges of robbing Mr. Kelly of $8.10. Rear was arraigned Thursday afternoon before County Judge Brindley. He did not enter a plea, stating that he did not have anything to say. His lawyer, Stanley Gordon, was out of town.

District Attorney Reid examined four witnesses for the state. P. J. Kelly, the first witness, testified that he had been in the country the afternoon of the robbery and that when he returned to the saloon Rear was lying on the floor and that nearly $1,000 was missing from the cash drawer. Mr. Kelly explained the presence of so much money by saying he had it to cash checks for railroad employes.

Detective McGraw, said on the stand that he reached the Kelly saloon shortly after the alleged robbery had been reported. He said he had examined Rear's head and could find no marks of a blow. Rear having told the police that he had been slugged and robbed, McGraw said he finally asked Rear where his head hurt and the cook said, on top. McGraw testified. About ten minutes later, McGraw said he again asked Rear where his head hurt and asserted the latter pointed to his forehead.

Detective Fitzsimmons testified and that the day after the alleged robbery he had a "hunch" that the missing money was still secreted about the saloon premises. Fifty dollars in $10 bills had been found later on the night of the robbery under the bar, where they had been thrown along with a blotter which had covered all the bills in a cigar box. Fitzsimmons told of searching the saloon building, accompanied by Policeman Tikal and of eventually finding the rest of the money, $849.85 in a paper sack under the coal in a shed in the rear of the saloon. With the restoration of this money, the checks that had already been cashed and the money found under the bar, Mr. Kelly's actual loss amounted to $1.15.

Chief Webber was the last witness called. He testified to the questioning Rear was put to in police headquarters. He asserted that Rear had declared he was "full of moonshine" when he took the money and did not know what he was doing.

The French government is rushing plans to get its devastated regions rebuilt, and its industrial machine fully equipped, to be ready for the next boom in world trade.

America's foreign trade—measured in tons, bushels and other forms of physical volume—fell off decidedly in September, says the federal reserve board's analysis.

Total exports in August were 41 per cent above the 1913 average. This figure fell to 20 per cent in September.

Measured in cash, September merchandise exports were $325,000,000, a drop from $604,686,000 in September, 1920. Imports correspondingly declined from $363,290,000 to $180,000,000.

FRANCE WORKS ON ANNIVERSARY OF ARMISTICE DAY

Britain Halts at Eleven O'clock for Two-Minute Tribute to War Dead

PARIS.—France worked Friday, the third anniversary of the Armistice which ended hostilities between the Germans and the victorious allied armies. There were a few scattered ceremonies incident to the day but the formal holiday had been postponed by government proclamation until Sunday as a demonstration to the world that the nation is in earnest in its work of reconstruction.

At Chateau Thierry, where American troops proved they could stop the Germans, was dedicated the first of a series of monuments which will mark the limits of the German invasion of France. Each stone will be inscribed: "Here the invader was driven back."

STARVING RUSSIANS LOOK TO AMERICANS TO RELIEVE HUNGER

"When Will the Americans Come"? is Query of Famine Sufferers Along the Volga

SARATOW, Russia, By a staff Correspondent of The Associated Press.—As one proceeds up the Volga river, the faces of the inhabitants grow thinner, their death lists increase from hunger, malaria and cholera and make the traveller involuntarily recall the "black death," which originated here in the Middle Ages.

Thus far there has been no emigration from the city of Saratow but there are 50,000 refugees living in squalor about its river front streets. They have flocked in from the country or are waiting transportation westward.

An incident typical of the speculation which takes place amid this struggle for life occurred at Uvek, below Saratow, when the men in charge of two food cars of the American Relief administration found the correspondent that his cars had not been ferried across the river to the village of Pugashusk, because the station master wanted either part of the food for himself or a cash tip.

At this point on the Volga, the first food begging began. Bare-footed children, who were huddled together on the lower decks, wandered about the steamer knocking on doors and windows and begging bits of bread. An Italian opera singer, going to Samara, played the piano and sang the finale of Tosca in the grand saloon until a crowd collected and then asked for bread, saying he had had none for three days.

At a German colonist town of Baronsk, formerly a grain center where there are dozens of empty transit granaries, it was said that five to 10 persons were daily dying of hunger and malaria and that last year's scanty crop had been requisitioned by the Bolsheviki who had not left enough for seed grain last summer. Bread costs 8,000 rubles a pound there.

At Baronsk also were 16,000 peasant children whose mothers were unable to feed them. The Soviet had requisitioned the best houses to shelter them and was serving soup to them daily.

At the once wealthy town of Volsk where the smokeless chimneys of the Portland cement works stand on the bleak, chalk bluffs above the river, the traveler was met with customary complaints of no medicines and no money to buy food. People meeting the steamer offered their home treasures for food or money. There was signs of pitiful attempts to make use of the Volga river water during the rainless summer to irrigate miles of cabbage patches between the low water and high water marks.

The market and shops of the town were closed. The only vestige of pre-war activity was at the cathedral, where services were held as usual and the vesper bells called to thin-faced people across the triangular square.

"When will the Americans come?" queried an old man with a world of anxiety in his voice as he hobbled toward the church door.

MORE FREIGHT IS MOVING

Traffic, About 80 Per Cent Normal, Reflects Business Conditions

CHICAGO.—Fall business has increased railroad freight traffic at an enormous rate, according to the car service division of the American Railway Association.

In the week ended Oct. 15, latest date reported, the number of cars loaded with revenue-producing freight on all railroads was 906,631. This was the greatest of any week since early November, 1920. It compares with 972,078 cars loaded in the corresponding week of 1919.

Biggest freight gains recently have been seen in the movement of coal. This is customary at this season. Shippers are rushing coal to Lake Erie ports before navigation closes the middle of November.

The increase in freight volume has been going ahead steadily for several months. Fear of a railroad tie-up was only partly responsible for October gains.

The number of freight cars in good repair on all railroads, has fallen below 422,000. This is a drop from about 500,000 good-repair cars idle last April. This was the peak.

In rough figures, American railroads now have 475,000 idle freight cars of all conditions and 1,825,000 cars working steadily.

That means railroad freight traffic is about 80 per cent normal, which probably reflects the condition of general business.

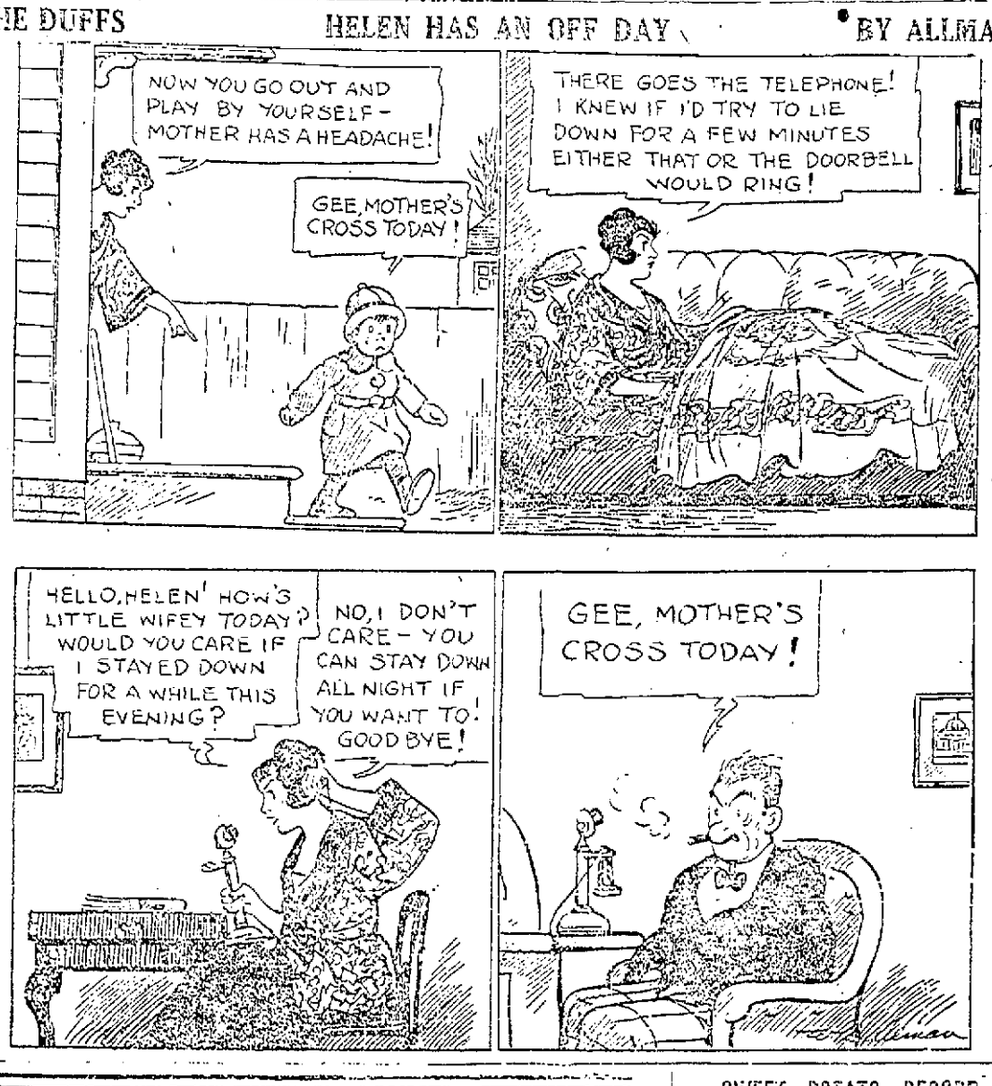

BEES AS WAR WEAPONS

Probably the most remarkable weapons of war ever used on the field of battle were swarms of bees. There are, at least, two well authenticated instances of the use of this novel and stinging war material. The first is related by Appian of the siege of Themiscyra in Pontus by Lucullus in his war against Mithridates. Turrets were brought up, mounds were built, and huge mines were made by the Romans. The people of Themiscyra dug upon these mines from above, and through the holes cast down upon the workmen bears and other wild animals together with swarms of bees. The second instance occurred in England. The Danes and Norwegians were attacking Chester, held by the Saxons and some Celtic auxiliaries. After adopting stoning and boiling water remedies in vain against the besiegers, the Saxons threw down all the bee-hives in the town upon the attackers, who were soon routed.

Kettles

Food should not be allowed to cool in the kettle in which it has cooked unless the kettle is earthenware. Delicately flavored vegetables are affected by the metal.

It is spring in Australia, and they are probably predicting a hot summer in winter.

MRS. J. A. BAYER GIVES DELIGHTFUL PRENUPTIAL AFFAIR

PLACES WERE laid for sixteen at a charmingly appointed table on Thursday at Hotel Stoddard when Mrs. John A. Bayer was hostess at one o'clock luncheon. It was a prenuptial function and was given in compliment to Miss Ruth Salzer, a bride of next Wednesday. The color scheme was carried out in a French combination of pink and blue, the central feature being a tall silver basket filled with Opelia roses, with a chain of bud vases holding rose buds and violets, surrounding it. At either end was a silver candelabra bearing tapers of blue. At the four ends were bud vases of roses on either side of a blue candle in a silver stick. An original idea had been carried out in the marking of the place of the bride-elect, a genuine "American Beauty" rose, a prettily suggestive compliment to the honor guest, in a tall silver vase, the wedding gift of Horace M. Bayer. At each of the other places was a dainty colonial nosegay composed of a pink rose bud surrounded by violets. It was tied with a coral satin ribbon, upon which was engraved the name of the guest. The epergne cloth was of equisitely fine filiet lace. At the last course a beautiful heart shaped "bride's" cake was brought in. It contained the usual tokens. Mrs. Nels Thompson secured the money and Mrs. Silas Horner the ring. The thimble remained in the uncut cake. The guests were members of the family and close friends.

MEAT BROTH FOOD FOR PLANTS

In the country after a fall of rain, or when the soil has been turned up and the fresh, moist clods are exposed to the air, you get the fragrant odor of the naked earth itself.

Though invigorating like a disinfectant rather than sweet like a perfume, this earth odor has actually been distilled and bottled.

For some time it was believed this odor was caused by the decay of certain chemicals in the soil, but recent analysis revealed that it comes from a tiny fungus.

Some of this fungus was taken from the soil and made to grow in a laboratory. It was not grown in soil, however. Instead these fungi were actually kept alive and nourished on foods such as pea soup, crumbs of bread, meat broth, glycerine, starch paste and the like.

When the fungi were sufficiently developed the experimenter distilled their fragrance by a special process and a liquid smelling strongly of fresh earth was obtained.

Don't put anything into fat to fry until the fat is boiling. Otherwise the food takes up the fat and has a fatty taste.

SWEET POTATO RECORD

South is Harvesting Largest Crop in History—Worth About $14,000,000

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—The south is harvesting the largest sweet potato crop in its history, due to increase in acreage.

Total production of sweet potatoes in the United States this year will be approximately 14,000,000 bushels.

More than one-fifth of the crop is being raised in Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The average production per acre this year will be about 102 bushels, compared with 107 bushels last year.

Thirteen southern states producing sweet potatoes probably will realize an average value of $112.55 per acre from this year's crop.

Such a price means one dollar a bushel.

Thousands of bushels have been placed in storage.

Offended His Dignity

Jim Bine, colored, has resigned as a Pullman porter on the Central branch. He resigned in a huff. It came about this way. One night Jim was standing on the platform at Concordia. Suddenly he slipped and fell and as he fell he threw his lantern high into the air. The engineer thought the lantern was giving the highball sign and pulled out of the station, leaving Jim on the platform. That peeved Jim and he decided to quit.—Atchison Globe.

ROADS TO REDUCE FREIGHT RATES TO MEET WAGE CUTS

Notices of Proposed Reduction in Wages to be Posted Next Week

NEW YORK. — Reductions in freight rates which will reflect the cut in the wages of nearly 750,000 employes of railroads north of the Ohio, Potomac rivers, and east of the Mississippi, decided upon here Thursday at a meeting of railway executives, will probably be taken up with the interstate commerce commission by executives of the lines Saturday. The committee was appointed to go to Washington and discuss the best means of bringing about the establishment of lower freight tariffs.

It was expected that notices of the wage reductions will be posted within a week, each road taking individual action the executives have directed statisticians to prepare data for use in the hearing they expect to be called by the railroad labor board relative to the justice of the wage cuts.

MARRIAGE BUREAUS DOING LAND OFFICE BUSINESS IN BERLIN

Wives May be Secured by the Payment of Registration Fee of Ten Marks

MEN IN GREATER DEMAND IN THE MATRIMONIAL MARKET

Literature Makes Strongest Appeal to the Men

BERLIN.—The numerous matrimonial bureaus of Berlin, where a spouse may be had for the payment of 10 marks registration fee, are doing a rushing business. The advertising columns of the newspapers are being utilized, "prospects" are being bombarded with letters and circulars extolling the advantages and virtues of the several bureaus are being scattered broadcast.

The marriage literature makes its principal appeal to the "home-loving instinct" of men, who are in much greater demand in the marriage market than women.

The press-agents, however, are not always discriminating or discreet in the selection of "eligible males." One bureau sent a letter to a married man with a large family urging him to "marry happily; don't select your acquaintance at random from the streets; send us your photograph and 10 marks and we'll find you a good wife."

The man became very indignant and wrote a scornful letter about it to his favorite newspaper.

Most of the marriages arranged through the matrimonial bureaus are of women more or less advanced in years, and of doubtful physical attraction, but with substantial bank accounts, and young men out of work or weary of working, said the agent of a bureau. The financial arrangements are agreed upon before marriage.

One young man who accepted a much older woman as wife after she had assured him she had money to support them, brought suit for divorce alleging he had been deceived and that the woman really had very little money. The woman admitted she had misrepresented her income but declared she felt justified because of the lonely life she had been living, with no opportunity to become acquainted with marriageable men.

While the young, attractive girls, who make applications for husbands are comparatively few, according to the agents, scores of young men apply for wives, virtually always with the stipulation that they must be wealthy or well-to-do. Formerly the chief woman applicants were servant girls. Shop girls seldom patronize the marriage bureaus.

Scores of marriages are made through the medium of the matrimonial bureaus every month, and their popularity has steadily increased since the war, which left the German women in a large and conscious majority.

STOP! Hard Rubbing Makes Wrinkles

French Pack Tightens Skin, Removes Wrinkles

Any Beauty Specialist will tell you that the hard rubbing of facial massage loosens the skin, causing wrinkles. The skin is like a piece of live rubber and will stand only a certain amount of stretching. Massage makes lines which soon develop into deep wrinkles. Furthermore, in massaging oil remains in the pores, collecting dust and dirt which bore deep into the pores of your skin, forming blackheads and skin eruptions. No massaging; no soap and water will remove these impurities down deep in the pores of your skin. That's why, in spite of all the creams and lotions you use on your face, you do not get any noticeable results. Your skin must be freed of these impurities to be healthy and beautiful.

MC DONALD'S FRENCH PACK, "The New Method Beautifier," "produces irresistible beauty." No massaging—No rubbing—"it beautifies as it dries," draws all the impurities from the skin. Take only one treatment—immediately you will notice a tightening of the skin—lines on forehead and around the eyes disappear—starts immediate circulation, builds up tissue, makes the skin glow with new life.

MC DONALD'S FRENCH PACK is positively GUARANTEED to remove lines on forehead and around the eyes—to remove pimples, blackheads, tan, freckles and sunburn—build up drooping facial tissues, to produce a skin finer and smoother in texture—or money back. Two treatments mailed postpaid for 25 cents, coin or stamps. Ten treatments $2.00 sold by all druggists. McDonald Co., La Crosse, Wis. Sold in La Crosse by Theeck-Jer's, Hebberd & Co., People's Drug Store, C. C. Laen, 727 Rose St., and 1288 Colemania St.

GERMANY RAPIDLY RECOVERING OCEAN FREIGHT BUSINESS

Aggregate Tonnage of Vessels Using Port of Hamburg 80 Percent of Peace Traffic

HAMBURG. — Germany's ocean freight-carrying trade is making rapid progress toward regaining its pre-war volume. Harbor statistics indicate that the aggregate tonnage of vessels using this port have reached 80 per cent of the peace traffic.

"Announcements of steamers bought back from former enemy powers follow each other in rapid succession, and harbor facilities are already proving insufficient to accommodate the growing traffic, now that big plants such as Krupps and Erhardts, which formerly manufactured war material, are turning out peace goods in great quantities for overseas transportation.

Shipping authorities are urging the revival of ambitious pre war plans for harbor extensions, on the ground that with the rapidly increasing export trade, the port will in two years' time be far too small, and freight business will be lost to Scandinavian ports.

Germans expect the South American trade especially to take a boom this early next year, when the new Hamburg-South American company's liners will be placed in commission.

Besides the Hamburg-American company's new liners Bayern, Hansa and Wurttemberg, three 12,000 ton passenger and freight steamers will be placed in the North American service by the North German Lloyd of Bremen; to be followed by the 30,000 tonner, Heidelberg, now being completed. New services are also being planned by both the Hamburg and Bremen companies to the far east.

Introduced by Cromwell

It is recorded that cabbages were first introduced into the North of Scotland by the soldiers of Cromwell. The country, torn by the passion of rival factions and embroiled in internal hostilities, was not in a favorable state to extend cultivation of the plants, but Cromwell, who was a great promoter of agriculture and all branches of gardening, encouraged his soldiers to introduce and promote all the best improvements wherever they went.

To see or not to see, that's the style question.

Everyone is criticising the new tariff. It's the "custom."

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

TOM MIX—MAJESTIC

In "The Night Horsemen," Tom Mix's vehicle now at the Majestic, the clan of hunters in and around La Crosse will find some extremely interesting "shots" of wild geese introduced as local color for the story. Really remarkable closeup films have been obtained for the pictures of the geese, both on the wing and at rest.

Wild Geese play an important part in the story, as they symbolize the call of the open which leads the hero from his fiancee to follow the honking hordes on their annual migration. The book from which the film was evolved, indeed, was originally called "Wild Geese."

Mix again enacts the role of Whistling Dan, a character so wild that the "honk, honk" of the geese flying northward cause him to forget even his wedding day in his desire to play in the wilderness. Love tames Whistling Dan after many stirring adventures in "The Night Horsemen," and when he again hears the "honk, honk" of the northward-bound geese he turns away, for the first time in his life, and goes home with Kare Cumberland, the girl who has loved him and waited for him. May Hopkins plays Kate.

MARY PICKFORD—RIVOLI

It may interest those who see Mary Pickford in "Suds," at the Rivoli theater to know that the wonderful visions of broad meadows deep with grass, and the life of luxury and ease which Miss Pickford as Amanda Affleck, the little Bundry slavey, promises Lavender, the decrepit old delivery horse that she saves from the glue factory, actually happened to Lavender in real life.

During the filming of "Suds," Lavender adapted himself so readily to the screen work and acted so well, permitting so many indignities to his person, that when the picture was finished Miss Pickford sent him to a large ranch near her Beverly Hills home, and there Lavender will spend his few declining years with nothing to do but take life easy and brag of his film experiences to his thoroughbred companions.

WM. DESMOND IN "FIGHTIN' MAD," THRILLING DRAMA OF MEX. BORDER AT THE CASINO

William Desmond, hero of many thrilling "western" dramas, is featured at the Casino Friday and Saturday in a Metro production, "Fightin' Mad," a story of the Mexican border. The story was written by H H. Van Loan, noted scenario and short story writer, who is probably best remembered for his sensational picture, "The Virgin of Stamboul." Mr. Desmond's last appearance in La Crosse was in "The Child Thou Gavest Me." The picture is replete with tense and thrilling scenes and is one of the fastest moving screen productions shown here in a long time. Mr. Desmond is supported by a notable cast which includes Virginia Brown Faire, Rosemary Theby, Doris Pawn, William Lawrence, William J. Dyer, George Stanley, Emmett C. King, Joseph J. Dowling, Jack Richardson, Bert Lindley and Vernon Shiveley. In addition to this feature picture, Mack Sennett's side-splitting comedy, "Don't Weaken," enacted by all the Sennett stars, also is on the program.

"DOUG" FAIRBANKS — RIVIERA

Fred Niblo, who directed "The Three Musketeers," showing this week at the Riviera, has a habit of getting what he wants in his scenes. When Douglas Fairbanks told Niblo that he didn't think he could make his fight realistic with Barbara LaMarr, who steals the queen's jewels in the play, the director was a bit worried. "If she were a man," said Doug, "it would be different." After some thought, however, Director Niblo solved the situation through a conspiracy with Miss LaMarr. "Doug says he doesn't believe in the cave man stuff," he told the actress, "and he absolutely refuses to muss you up in this scene. Now this fight has got to be realistic because it is one of the biggest scenes in the picture, so I guess it's up to you. Punch him, bite him and scratch him—make him fight, understand?" Miss LaMarr understood very thoroughly with the result that the fight is realistic enough to satisfy even the most ardent admirers of Jack Dempsey.

VIOLA DANA—STRAND

The fact that you can never tell just what is going to happen, whether when you are down to your last sou and the clouds hang over your head, your luck may not change, or vice versa, whether calamity may not be around the corner at the heydey of properity was used as the foundation of a fascinating picture, "Life's Darn Funny," starring Viola Dana, and showing at the Strand today and Saturday. The original plot of the picture came from Christine Jope Slade's Saturday Evening Post story, "Caretakers Within," which took the readers of this weekly by storm. Immediately upon its publication, officials of Metro saw the tremendous possibility inherent in it for a gloriously thrilling picture that would contain every element necessary for giving entertainment. The result is "Life's Darn Funny," a Dallas Fitzgerald production, adapted by Molly Parro and Arthur D. Ripley. It was photographed by John Arnold and A. F. Mantz executed the art settings. For her supporting cast Miss Dana has Gareth Hughes, Eva Gordon, Kathleen O'Connor and Mark Fenton.

The Terrors of Enology

A California man announces a new profession, calling himself an "enologist," or expert in making wine under Volstead specifications. This department heard of another enologist not long ago, who was modest. So modest, in fact, that instead of proclaiming himself an enologist, he was content to drift along merely as a farmer. He called up a friend in town and said, "Joe, you know that grape juice I made awhile back? Well, sir, it spoiled on me." "That so, Fred?" replied the friend. "That is too bad." "Yeah, Joe, I just thought I'd tell you—it spoiled pretty damn good."—Kansas City Star.

ARMISTICE DAY IS GENERALLY OBSERVED THROUGHOUT STATE

University Holds Memorial Service for its 150 Soldier Dead

MADISON, Wis.—Wisconsin stopped its work Friday to do homage to America's unknown soldier, whose burial at Arlington cemetery, symbolized the sacrifice made during the world war by the nation's armed forces.

The people of the state generally observed a partial holiday, spent in special church service and in attending Armistice day ceremonies held in nearly every city. State and municipal governments were at a standstill.

Hundreds of thousands of school children were impressed with the significance of the occasion by appropriate exercises held throughout the state on recommendation of John Callahan, superintendent of public instruction. Patriotism was the dominant note of the school programs.

In honor of its 150 soldier dead the University of Wisconsin closed its doors and held memorial exercises.

By common consent, as Governor Blaine recommended, the entire state observed the day as a holiday. All work was stopped for two minutes at eleven o'clock while silent tribute was paid to the unknown soldier whose burial took place at that hour.

PICKED OUT WRONG COLLEGE

Mrs. McIntyre was calling upon Mrs. Cassidy, whose husband was in affluent circumstances and whose daughter had, therefore, been sent to college.

"By the way," said Mrs. McIntyre, when the two had been gossiping for awhile, "where is Clara? I haven't seen her for an age."

"Clara is at college," proudly responded the fond mother, and then added: "And I am so worried about her. I haven't had a letter from her for nearly two weeks."

"There is where you made a mistake," was the prompt rejoinder of Mrs. McIntyre. "Instead of letting her go to college, why didn't you send her to one of those correspondence schools?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Pardon me, doctor," broke in the medical student, who had caught these words as he was about to pass by into the consumptive ward, "but if you have no objections, I'd like to take a few notes on that accident case."

He pulled his notebook from his pocket. "Was the case a child?"

"No," the surgeon informed him to his embarrassment, "I was speaking of my umbrella."—Science and Invention.

GOLD STAR MOTHERS IN NEW YORK HEAR WASHINGTON RITES

NEW YORK—A little army of gray-haired women—New York's Gold Star Mothers—marched Friday morning to Madison Square Garden to sit for an hour in seats of honor and listen while the unknown soldier's body, symbolizing all the sons they gave to their country, was laid to rest with a nation's homage, at Arlington cemetery.

The mothers, more than 1,000 of them, were escorted by a guard of honor of infantrymen, blue jackets and marines. For them, and for them alone, had seats been reserved in the great hall which long before their coming had begun to fill with citizens from every walk of life, reverently eager to follow the Arlington services through the telephonic amplifying device with which the garden and Madison Square outside had been equipped.

BAR COED SOLICITING AT "U" OF WISCONSIN

MADISON, Wis.—Coeds at the University of Wisconsin will no longer be permitted to solicit the male students for subscriptions to university publications or canvass drives, no matter how worthy the purpose, according to a ruling of student license interest committee Thursday.

"The men of the university," said Dean of Women Louis Nardin, "have plenty of real college spirit and will support activities without the solicitation of girls. A better way can be found. We veil the loyalty of Wisconsin's men when we insinuate that they will not give their suppot without being cajoled by the women."

RUSSIA DEPENDENT FOR SUPPLIES ON STREET PEDDLERS

Country Gives Foreigner Impression of Doing Business on "Peanut-stand Basis"

MOSCOW.—(By a Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press)—Russia gives a foreigner the impression of being a great nation which is trying to live on a peanut stand basis.

There is magnitude to nothing but the population—120,000,000 persons—are dependent upon the supplies afforded by pushcart dealers.

In Moscow, Petrograd, Samara and other cities, trade conditions are the same. Basket peddlers, street corner stands and small, woe-begone shops with empty cartons and fruit scattered over their shelves to make them seem full, provide all the food that is available.

Bread, potatoes, onions, meat, sugar, sunflower seed, and red pop are offered by these dealers who have come into existence since the embargo was raised on trade in foods. One sees few full loaves of bread in these shops. The bread is sold by the pound and most customers cannot afford an entire loaf.

Occasionally, a tin of American salmon or American condensed milk is seen in a shop window or on a market wagon. But such luxuries are speedily gobbled up by customers who happen to be ruble millionaires. Comb honey also appears spasmodically in the larger shops. It is 35,000 rubles for less than a pound, and disappears rapidly.

Rusty tins of Argentine and Australian corned beef also come to light in unexpected places and a few tins of American army hardtack find their way into the market. No dealer ever seems to have more than one tin of these and the source of the supply is mysterious.

A member of the foreign trade council who was asked where supplies of this sort came from replied that they were probably supplies which the Bolshevist government had bought abroad and which had slipped into private hands.

Most of the merchants are persons who have been forced to open stands as a means of livelihood. Half of them are women. Frequently everything from diamond bracelets to potatoes is offered for sale on the same stand. Nearly all dealers buy and sell all sorts of commodities.

TAKES UMBRELLA TO MASTER

"I'll show you a regular dog," said Gardiner to his friend Johnson, whom he had invited to dinner at his home in Long Island, according to the New York Sun. They had alighted from the train and it was raining. Gardiner gazed up and down the street anxiously.

"What are you looking for?" asked Johnson.

"There!" exclaimed Gardiner, ignoring his friend's question and pointing down the street. "There's a regular dog."

A Belgian police dog came running toward the station, with an umbrella in its mouth. The dog stopped in front of Gardiner.

"That's my dog," said Gardiner. "On rainy days my wife gives him an umbrella and he brings it down to the station so I don't have to walk home in the wet."

"Four hundred of New York's fattest will reduce," says a news item. As a slogan we suggest "Reduce or bust."

T. R.'S MODESTY AS A YOUNG MAN SHOWN BY EARLY LETTERS

Documents are Presented to Roosevelt Memorial Association

NEW YORK—Three letters in the handwriting of Theodore Roosevelt, presented recently to the Roosevelt Memorial association, throw interesting light on the early character of the future president.

The great American's modesty as a young man, verging nearly on timidity, is disclosed in a note accepting the offer of a trusteeship of the New York Infant Asylum. The letter was written to Dr. Henry D. Nicoll, then head of the asylum, in 1881, the year when Roosevelt, then 23 years old, took his seat in the state assembly.

His "absolute inexperience," Roosevelt wrote, would prevent his "being of much use," but, with a determination also evidenced in another letter to Dr. Nicoll, he promised to "try my best."

Ten months later, in 1882, he wrote Dr. Nicoll again, expressing pleasure in accepting the position as trustee, but adding:

"I only fear that I will by no means come up to your expectations. But I shall do my best."

Roosevelt's early love for outdoor life, a characteristic which had much to do with the molding of his later life, and his admiration for picturesque characters in frontier history, come to the front in the third letter, written in 1890 to Richard Watson Gilder, editor of Century magazine.

The letter is in a nervous, hasty script and was written from Washington, where Roosevelt was holding his first federal office, that of civil service commissioner.

In it he appealed to Mr. Gilder to have a biography or sketch of Kit Carson's life written and pointed out that Carson and his comrades were "men of real mark" and their work "of utmost consequence and should not be allowed to be forgotten"—the same appeal now being sent out broadcast by the Roosevelt Memorial association for contributions to perpetuate the memory of Theodore Roosevelt.

He suggested that Mr. Gilder obtain an article on civil service reform from "Cabot Lodge," who, he said, was "a man of note, and a rising one in his party."

At that time Senator Lodge was a representative in congress. At Roosevelt's suggestion the articles were written by Mr. Lodge in the magazine during that and the following year.

In 1890, Roosevelt was a prolific writer of stories of hunting and of wild animal life and he concluded his letter in the spirit of the literary freelance, keen to sell his stories.

"I will buckle down to the three hunting articles for bear, moose, panther, etc., and I will bring in the 'Turk' story, he wrote, and added the suggestion, "My bear scrape would, I think, make a good picture, if you thought it worth while; also the death of the mountain bison, and of the bull moose."

The two Nicoll letters were presented to the Roosevelt Memorial association by Mrs. Henry D. Nicoll and the Gilder letter by the publishers of Century Magazine.

Origin of Wedding Cake

The wedding cake dates back to the laws of Romulus and the early days of Rome. Instead of elaborate marriage festivals Romulus instituted the confarreatio. The union of the man and woman was solemnized simply and quickly by the eating of a loaf of barley bread together. This marriage ceremony was in force for some generations among the Romans. Then as civilization developed the barley bread became a cake.

China's arguments is that she wants to mind her own p's and queues.

MILLION RUSSIANS EXILED FROM HOME REPORTED DESTITUTE

NEW YORK—One million Russians exiled from soviet Russia are living practically destitute in European countries, Princess Julia Cantacuzene Speransky declared Thursday in her report to the board of directors of the American Central committee for Russian relief. She urged the work of the committee, of which she is chairman, be extended during the coming year, basing her pleas on the fact that the American Red Cross is withdrawing from Europe and that the American relief administration is gradually closing its centers there in order to concentrate on relief in bolshevik Russia.

Valuable Ideas from Dreams

I often think that many of the most valuable things we know are learned by chance or by men the world supposed to be dreamers. It took lazy old like Newton, sprawled luxuriously under the apple tree, to discover the laws of motion as the apples dropped from the wind shaken boughs. And the story of the boy watching the tea kettle with the white giant inside but emphasizes the fact that keen observation and dreaming may be two entirely different things.—The County Agent in Farm Life.

NORMAL ANTICIPATES TOUGH SLEDDING IN GAME WITH OSHKOSH

Captain Kevin to be Out Because of Injuries Sustained Last Week

EASTERNERS HAVE FORMIDABLE LIST OF VICTORIES TO CREDIT

Gerber and Sezyzerbocki Will be in Lineup Again

A big booster mass meeting will be held Saturday morning in the normal auditorium preparatory to the game in the afternoon. The meeting will be featured by speeches by prominent business men, former students, and football men. Following this session a monster parade heralding the activities of the afternoon will be held in the downtown district.

Owing to the heavy snow storm here the early part of the week Coach Keeley's squad has been handicapped in its preparation for the forthcoming battle to be staged Saturday.

The contest to be pulled off on the local field tomorrow will be the hardest seen this year by fans due to the fact that Oshkosh has defeated all its opponents. The winner will battle with Stout Institute for the State championship Turkey Day. Oshkosh normal comes here with a strong team and a list of victories against some of the strongest teams in this section, including St. John's Military Academy and Lawrence College, Lawrence battles with Ripon tomorrow for the title five championship.

Kevin Out

Captain Kevin, guard on the local team, will be out of the game on account of injuries sustained in the St. Thomas game. He has a sprained ankle, Gerber, guard and Sezyzerbocki end who were out of the game last week will be back in the battle with their old pep. The probable line up for tomorrow's game is as follows:

Center—Royal.
Guards—Gerber, Mattison, or Engelke.
Tackles—Jonas and Lewis.
Ends—Sezyzerbocki and Stoneman.
Quarterback—McCormick.
Halfbacks—Moran, Ettinger and Hurd.
Fullback—Ross.

WISCONSIN FAVORED OVER MICHIGAN IN CONTEST SATURDAY

Badgers Face Wolverines With Five Straight Victories to their Credit

MADISON, Wis.—Wisconsin is favored for a victory over Michigan when the two teams meet here Saturday in their first gridiron contest since 1904. With a record of five straight victories the Badgers are counted on to maintain themselves in the running for the conference championship, despite the powerful offense which the Wolverines are expected to open up their old rivals.

Gibson, former quarterback, will be at left half for Wisconsin, while Williams, who guided the team against Minnesota two weeks ago will be in the pilot position. Gould will play left end.

Both teams have rested for the past two weeks and are in top condition.

WATCH FOE'S EYES, IS TIP FROM HARVARD CHIEF

KEITH KANE, HARVARD CAPTAIN

By BOB DORMAN

BOSTON.—"Watch the other fellow's eyes!"

That is the advice of Keith Kane, the stalwart captain and guard of the crimson eleven.

"Football's like fencing or boxing. To a man who knows the game, the other man's intentions can be seen in his eye.

"I think that is the reason so many of the top-notch football players are credited with an uncanny ability of following the ball.

"It's simply due to what they have read in their opponent's eyes, giving them an inkling of what the other team is going to try and pull off."

Kane is a husky athlete—six feet of brawn and muscle, weighing 185 pounds.

His home is in Newport, R. I., where he was born twenty-one years ago.

He has played on the Harvard team three years and in recognition of his great playing, he was elected captain of this year's eleven.

YALE VS. PRINCETON IS FOOTBALL CLASSIC THIS WEEK ON EASTERN GRID

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—The second of the eastern football classics for the season of 1921 will be played in the Yale bowl here Saturday afternoon when the elevens of Princeton and Yale meet in their annual struggle. Dating back to 1873 the annual gridiron battle between the two famous universities is so surrounded and entwined with 'varsity and football tradition, that, with the possible exception of the Harvard-Yale contest, it exceeds in interest from an eastern standpoint any other game of the year.

Battle Always Famed

Year in and year out regardless of whether the two teams are of exceptional power or merely mediocre in comparison with other college teams of the same section, the battle of the Bulldog and Tiger famed in song and story, attracts record attendance. Each fall the Palmer Memorial stadium, at Princeton, or the Yale bowl here, as the case may be, is taxed to capacity and thousands of applications for tickets are returned for lack of seats. Tomorrow's game is no exception for the huge football amphitheater of the Blue has been sold out for weeks and tickets would command many a hundred per cent premium were they available to the speculators.

Three victories in a row for the Tigers would shatter all Princeton precedents and even the most ardent Orange and Black adherent is influenced by the mysterious influence which has allotted strings of victories at a time to Yale and only scant triumphs for the Tiger. The preponderance of Yale victories is shown by a study of the series record. Since the first game played in 1873 and won by Princeton, the two university elevens have met 44 times. In this long period of combat the New Haven collegians have won 28 games; Princeton 12 and nine have resulted in tie contests. In total points Yale also leads by a wide margin for the Blue has piled up 361 points since 1883, when the present system of football scoring was first adopted, to Princeton's 185.

YOST CARRYING 33 MEN ENROUTE TODAY TO CARDINAL CAMP

Michigan Adherents Hope for Victory; Many Crippled Stars Return

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—After a two weeks rest from gridiron clashes during which they have been drilled in Rainger plays, members of Michigan's football squad were on the way to Madison Friday where tomorrow they will engage Wisconsin in one of the most important conference games of the day.

Coach Yost took his entire squad of thirty-three men to Madison, leaving here late last night.

Although comparative scores this season show Wisconsin to be the stronger eleven, Michigan adherents gave their team a chance for victory, basing their contentions upon the fact that several of the squad's stars who were crippled during the earlier conference games have virtually recovered.

The same line that faced Illinois two weeks ago will go into the game at Madison, but shifts in the other positions were in prospect.

THREE UNBEATEN BIG TEN ELEVENS MEET OPPONENTS ON GRIDIRON SATURDAY

CHICAGO, Ill.—The three unbeaten Big Ten teams each have games scheduled for tomorrow and with one exception these three teams will probably keep their records clean. Ohio State meets Purdue, Iowa, is matched against Indiana on the Iowa city gridirons and Wisconsin meets Michigan.

The University of Chicago will play Illinois and the game promises to be of more than passing interest. Its importance in the schedule ended with the defeat of Chicago by Ohio State last Saturday.

Indications point to a hard battle between Wisconsin and Michigan, though Wisconsin has not lasted defeat this season. Michigan has a perfect squad of 32 men on which to draw and the thirty-third, Don Wiesman, out because of injuries, will be on the grounds at Madison. Coach Yost has announced that he will not pick the eleven for the game until he has seen the condition of the ground.

Ohio Favored

There is little doubt as to the outcome of the Ohio State-Purdue game for Ohio has beaten all comers, including Chicago. Since Chicago beat Princeton and other Big Ten opponents except Ohio, the overwhelming strength of Ohio is apparent compared with Purdue, whose only victory was over Northwestern university. The Purdue-Northwestern game was played to decide cellar honors.

Likewise, the Iowa-Indiana game favors Iowa, which has come through the season clean. Indiana lost all of her conference games, while Iowa has beaten Minnesota, Purdue, Illinois and Northwestern. Should Illinois win this game it would upset almost all calculations as Chicago has been a real Big Ten star, while Illinois has trampled through the season with a hopeless outlook.

Brick Shipping Dangerous

The captains of ships which carry bricks have to be very careful. An ordinary brick is capable of absorbing a pint of water. So, with a cargo of bricks in the hold, serious leakage may quite well go undetected, for the water that enters is sucked up as fast as it gets in. If this should be the case the consequences are bound to be most serious.

LABOR CONDITIONS IMPROVED REPORTS INDUSTRIAL BOARD

Number of Workers Employed Increased 6.5 Percent Since June is Claim

MADISON, Wis.—Employment conditions in Wisconsin industries have shown an improvement of 6.5 per cent since June, the industrial commission reports Friday in its monthly summary of the state labor market. The number of employes increased 1 per cent during October with a raise of 1.1 per cent in total wages paid, and practically no change in the average weekly earnings of factory employes.

Labor market reports of the industrial commission are based on an analysis of the returns of 211 establishments with 58,400 employes, or about one-third of the factory workers of the state now employed. The weekly payroll of these factories totals $1,270,000.

"For the past four months, each month has shown an increase in the number of employes, so that the total now is 6.5 per cent greater than it was in June," the commission says. "The only industries that have not shown some recovery are mining, machinery manufacture, sawmills and planing mills, milk products and laundries."

As compared with July a year ago, the commission reports that the number of employes is 34.2 per cent smaller, total wages paid 48.5 per cent less and average weekly earnings 24.7 per cent lower.

The average weekly earnings for all industries were $21.72, which is three cents more than the previous month. This is $8.12 less than the peak reached in August, 1920, the report states, and represents a reduction of 27.2 per cent. The total factory payroll of the state is now said to be 52 per cent less than it was in August, 1920, representing the loss in wages due to unemployment as well as wage cuts and part time employment.

Cost of living on October 1, was seven-tenths of one per cent less than it was on September 1, 1921. The decline since the peak of prices which was recorded on July 1, 1920, is 20 per cent.

Increase in the number of employed as compared with the preceding months was well distributed, according to the commission which says, however, that decreases were shown in stone crushing, quarrying, iron mining, machinery, automobiles and motorcycles, milk products and shipbuilding.

As compared with July a year ago, only stone working, boots and shoes, hosiery and other knit goods, meat packing and light and power show an increase in the number of employes, although railroad repair shops, clothing and printing are practically the same. Mining metal industries, wood industries and milk products have been most seriously affected, it is said.
